MANCHESTER,

THE centre and emporium of the cotton manufactures, and one of the most ancient towns of Lancashire, is situated in the south-eastern extremity of that county, in 53° 22" north latitude, and 2° 42" west longitude, 186 miles from London, and 36 from Liverpool. The rivers Irk and Medlock here pour their streams into the Irwell, which, after diffusing its benefits to the town, and being navigable for seven miles below it, joins the magnificent Mersey; thereby forming an easy communication by water with Liverpool, the second port in the British empire. The three first mentioned rivers, which, in a geographical description of continental rivers would hardly deserve to be mentioned, are, in a commercial and manufacturing country like England, and more particularly in a town like Manchester, of incalculable importance. The Irwell, the largest of the three, originates near the boundaries of the counties of York and Lancaster; and the Medlock and the Irk arise not many miles to the north-east of the town: the former is available to all domestic purposes, and, after accommodating numerous dye-houses and factories, pours its redundant waters into the Duke's canal; the latter, it is supposed, turns more water wheels than any other stream of equal length in the kingdom. Besides these natural advantages, Manchester possesses the artificial one of a very extensive inland navigation, by means of numerous canals and branches, to almost all the principal towns in the kingdom. By these channels of intersection, it receives raw materials for its manufactures, coals, materials for building, and various other articles, and distributes to all parts of the commercial world the amazing productions of its ingenuity and labour. The strata of all parts, in and round the town, are of a nature advantageous to building; and the neighbourhood abounds with coal of excellent quality. With all these facilities and advantages, seconded by the skill and perseverance of an industrious community, Manchester has attained to its present pre-eminence, as a place of manufactures; of grand importance, as administering extensive pecuniary services to the revenue of the kingdom, and to the employment and support of an immense population.

THE ANCIENT HISTORY OF MANCHESTER may, with tolerable certainty, be traced as far back as the year 79 of the christian era—Julius Agricola, about the time that Titus was besieging Jerusalem, effected a conquest of this country as far north as the Clyde; and, in order to secure his conquests, fortified several military stations, of which Mancunium (i. e. Manchester) was one, wherein a castle was built on the site of what is now called 'Castle-field.' During the Saxon dynasty, this place, now called Mancestre, fell to the lot of a chief, who fixed his residence where the summer camp of the Romans had formerly stood; he, finding it inconvenient to send his grain to the mill on the Medlock (still called "Knott-mill," and a corruption, as some suppose, of Canute's mill) built another on the fosse, where Cateaton-street now stands. The appellation of 'Deansgate' was derived from the dean, who was then at the head of ecclesiastical affairs in Manchester, and had his residence in it; this was afterwards the Parsonage house; and a few plots of land, which had been alienated from the church, and are now built on, still retain the name of the Parsonage. About 1086, Albert de Gresley, one of the followers of the Norman adventurer, fixed his residence here: Robert, his son, after having attended his sovereign Henry I. on an expedition into Normandy, obtained the grant of a fair in 1134, to be held annually in his lordship of Manchester, on St. Matthew's day, and the day before and after; and it is now held on the first of October, under the denomination of Acres fair (vulgarly called 'Ackers' fair'). His great grandson Thomas, on the fourteenth of May, 1301, granted the burgesses a charter of the custom of the manor, whereby he constituted Manchester a free borough. Thomas de la Warre, a descendant of Robert de la Warre (who succeeded Robert de Gresley in the lordship of Manchester) in the 9th of Henry V. obtained a license to found a collegiate church here, which he liberally endowed; and about this time, he also erected the present college for the residence of the collegiate body, at an expense of £3,000, a very considerable sum in those days. John Huntingdon was the first warden, and as he presided 37 years, viz. from 1422 to 1459, it is probable that the greater part of the church was completed during his life-time. In the beginning of the sixteenth century, Hugh Oldham, a native of Oldham, and bishop of Exeter, founded the grammar school.—In 1579 the manorial rights and privileges were sold to John Lacye for £3,000. and he resold them in 1596 for £3,500. to Sir Nicholas Mosley, from whom the present Sir Oswald Mosley, Bart. is lineally descended. In the second attempt of the Stewarts to regain the crown, in 1745, Manchester was much agitated; on the 29th of November, the main of the rebel army reached Manchester, and about two o'clock of that day, the prince, wearing a light plaid, belted with a blue sash, and mounting a blue bonnet with a white rose in front, marched into the town, and took up his quarters in Market-street-lane, at the residence of Mr. Dickenson, from that circumstance called "the palace;" since converted into an inn, and still bearing that name. On the 1st of December the rebel army quitted Manchester, to the south, and as it is not within the scope of this work to follow these adventurers out of the town, and as the issue of this campaign, so disastrous to its agitators and supporters, is so well known, it only remains to be added here, that the animosities produced by this insurrection long out-lived the rebellion itself. The local authorities of Manchester did not escape censure for their conduct, or rather quiescence, during the rebellion; and in 1747 the constables, Messrs. Bowker and Ogden, were arraigned at Lancaster, on a charge of high treason, which was but feebly supported, and the jury pronounced an honourable acquittal. Previous to dismissing the subject matter of what may be deemed the early history of Manchester, the introduction of a few facts, connected with times past, affecting or interesting the immediate town, may not here be out of place.

In 1654 the lord protector issued a writ to the high sheriff of this county, requiring the burgesses of Manchester to return a member to parliament; in obedience to which mandate Charles Worsley was returned. In the following year another election for the borough of Manchester took place, and on the 12th of August, 1656, Richard Radcliffe, esq. of Manchester, took his seat in the house. The career of the roundheads now drew towards a close, and after the restoration, Manchester ceased to enjoy the elective franchise.—In 1703 the first boarding school was opened in Manchester, and a dancing-school followed. Soon after this time tea began to be drank in company, by persons of respectability, instead of home made wine.—In 1722 Eight days were then required to effect the interchange of a post letter with London.—In 1737 the first newspaper was established here by R. Whitworth, called 'the Manchester Magazine,' which, with the stamp, was sold for three-halfpence.—In 1750 hackney coaches were attempted to be established, but the attempt failed; sedan chairs being the then preferred vehicles.—In 1760 the number of private carriages kept by persons of the commercial class, in Manchester, did not exceed three.—In 1768 Christian VII. king of Denmark, on his tour through England, visited the recently formed works of the duke of Bridgewater, and lodged with his suite at the Bull's Head Inn.—In 1770 the travelling from this town to Liverpool employed nearly half as much time as a journey to London does now. The diligence left Manchester at six o'clock in the morning, breakfasted at Irlam, dined at Warrington, drank tea at Prescott, and contrived to drop comfortably into Liverpool just at night-fall! In 1774 a duty was imposed of three-pence per square yard upon any piece of goods that was printed, painted, or stained.—In 1785 the New Bailey bridge was opened.—On the 22nd of May, 1787, the first stone of the New Bailey prison was laid, and in 1790 it was opened for the reception of prisoners.—In the year 1808 a negotiation was set on foot by a town's meeting for the purchase of the manor, which is co-extensive with the township, and all the right of tolls, markets and standings relating thereto; for this property and these privileges Sir Oswald Mosley asked £90,000. The deputation appointed to treat with him, offered him £70,000.; that difference was, however, adjusted, but unfortunately for the town, another meeting annulled all that had been already done; and from the increased value of the rents and tolls since that time, it is not probable that another opportunity may arise of throwing into the hands of the town those advantages which they so unaccountably neglected to embrace.—On the 1st of August, 1820, Blackfriars new bridge, of stone, was first crossed by passengers.—The year 1821 was signalized by one of the most splendid, popular and imposing ceremonies ever witnessed out of the metropolis, which took place on the 19th of July, to celebrate the coronation of his Majesty George IV. A procession was formed of the authorities and heads of the towns; all the principal trades; several regiments, with their field pieces and bands of music; all the children of the several schools, &c. The magnitude of the cavalcade may be inferred from its extending five miles, including the streets to the right and left. At five o'clock in the afternoon a distribution of refreshments commenced, and in the course of the evening twenty-seven oxen, sixty sheep and four hundred barrels of strong beer were distributed to the populace.

Having thus briefly touched upon events of 'olden time,' as well as upon others, the recollection of which exist with the present generation, all, in a greater or less degree, imparting interest to, or connected by their effects with the town of Manchester; the next subject for consideration, one that has lifted it to so high a pinnacle of consequence and wealth, is its TRADE and MANUFACTURES. It appears that as early as 1552 the manufacture of woollen fabrics was carried on in Manchester: but it was not till 1750 that the cotton trade assumed any high importance. In 1781, two years before Arkwright's machinery for carding and spinning cotton by steam was introduced here, the quantity of cotton wool imported amounted only to 5,198,778lbs; but the successive inventions of Higs, Hargrave, Arkwright, Crompton and Watt, so astonishingly facilitated the manufacture, that its extent has been increased more than thirty fold. In 1800 the quantity of cotton wool imported into this country was 56,010,732lbs. In 1810 it amounted to 132,488,935lbs. In 1820 the weight was 144,818,100lbs. In 1823 it had increased to 169,773,600lbs. and in 1824 the quantity was 136,735,566lbs. The official value of cotton manufactures, including yarn exported in the year 1818, was £21,319,683. and in the year ending 10th of Oct. 1821, the value was £30,019,184. About four-fifths of the whole amount of the cotton trade of the kingdom centres in Lancashire; and it is calculated that the capital employed in that county in this trade alone, in buildings and machinery, exceeds £8,000,000. In 1825 there were, in the parish of Manchester alone, upwards of 20,000 steam looms in motion, & it is ascertained that the number has increased since that year. In the same year there were, in the townships of Manchester, Chorlton-row, Ardwick, Salford, Pendleton and Hulme, 104 spinning factories, worked by 110 steam engines, of the aggregate power of 3,598 horses; and in addition to those engines used in spinning cotton, there were 102 others, of 1,277 horse power, applied to other purposes of trade and manufacture within the same limits. Although the spinning and manufacture of cotton, and the production of various fabrics from that article, may be considered as the principal branches of trade in this town, yet it must not be inferred, that the woollen, linen and silk trades, are inconsiderable: the latter branch has, within a very few years, wonderfully increased: establishments of the first magnitude are continually springing up; and to such perfection are the textures wrought from this beautiful material, by the genius and persevering industry of the Manchester artisan, that the looms of Spitalfields and France are rivalled by those of this town. Besides the great extent of business transacted in the articles before named, Manchester has long been conspicuous in the manufacture of hats; and it is a fact well known, that what are called London hats are chiefly made in this town and neighbourhood, some of the finer sorts being finished in the metropolis. The making umbrellas, and a great variety of articles embraced under the denomination of 'Manchester smallwares,' employ many hands and a considerable capital: the iron foundries are of great magnitude; and machine making is executed here to an extent commensurate with the vast demand for this species of manufacture.

The PUBLIC BUILDINGS in Manchester appropriated to the purposes of trade and commerce are not numerous. The Manchester exchange, which is more to be commended for its internal convenience than admired for its outward beauty, is a place of resort for the merchants, manufacturers and principal traders of the town and neighbourhood. It was built by subscription, and opened on the 2nd of January, 1809. The cloth-halls, in York-buildings and Chapel-street, Salford, are public marts for the sale of Yorkshire cloths: and the corn-exchange, in Hanging-ditch, affords accommodation to corn-brokers and dealers. The edifices for the performance of sacred worship are very numerous: there are sixteen churches and three chapels, belonging to the establishment—their names, with their dates of erection, are as follows. In priority of date stands the venerable collegiate church, which was originally founded by Thomas Lord de la Warre, in the reign of Henry V.; and in the reign of Henry VII. it was rebuilt by the munificent piety of many persons. [The vignette upon the map of the county of Lancashire, which accompanies this work, is a faithful representation of this beautiful and ancient pile.] Trinity church, or chapel, in Salford, was erected in 1635, and rebuilt in 1752. St. Ann's, in St. Ann's square, was founded in 1709, and consecrated on the 17th July, 1712. St. Thomas's chapel, Ardwick, was consecrated November 10th, 1741. St. Mary's, in Deansgate, was opened for public worship on the 29th of Sept. 1756. On the 10th of May, 1823, Mr. Philip Wootton, an ingenious and enterprising artisan, was employed to remove the gilt ball and cross, which surmounted the spire; the rod supporting the cross having lost its erect position through a violent gale of wind. By means of a chain of ladders, this person succeeded in ascending to the top of the spire, in presence of many thousands of anxious and half-petrified spectators, and accomplished the perilous task of lowering the ponderous ball and cross in safety to the ground. St. Paul's, in Turner-street, was consecrated on the 28th of July, 1765. St. John's, in Byrom-street, was begun on the 28th of April, 1768, and consecrated on the 7th of July, 1769. St. James's church, in Charlotte-street, was consecrated on the 18th of August, 1788. St. Michael's church, in Angel-street, was consecrated on the 23rd of July, 1794. St. Mark's, Cheetham Hill, was finished in 1794. St. Peter's, at the bottom of Mosley-street, was founded on the 11th December, 1788, and consecrated on the 6th September, 1794. St. Stephen's church, in Salford, was consecrated on the 23rd of July, 1769. St. George's, in St. George's road, was opened on the 1st of April, 1798, but not consecrated till 1818. All Saints', Chorlton-row, was consecrated on the 12th of April, 1820. St. Luke's chapel, Chorlton-row, is regularly licensed, but not yet consecrated. St. Philip's church, on the north side of Bank parade, Salford, was consecrated 21st September, 1825. St. Matthew's, a beautiful specimen of modern Gothic architecture, in Liverpool road, near Castle-field, had its foundation stone laid on St. Matthew's day, in the year 1822, and was consecrated the 24th September, 1825. The foundation of a large Gothic church, to be called St. George's, was laid in the suburb township of Hulme, in September, 1826, and the stone work finished in Nov. 1827. There are upwards of forty places of worship for the dissenters of various religious denominations; some of these erections are truly handsome, and all bespeak the respectability of the different classes by whom they are supported. The Roman catholics form a numerous community in Manchester; they have three chapels. St. Augustin's, in Granby-row, is a beautiful edifice, built at a cost of £10,000. under the direction of Mr. John Palmer; opened on the 27th of September, 1820; the others are, one in Mulberry-street and another in Rook-street.

The persevering endeavours of the benevolent of Manchester, in promoting the education of the children of the poor, is most laudably conspicuous: no child, however abject the poverty of its parents, is deprived of possessing that degree of education which is to be derived from attendance at a Sunday school. Almost every place of worship here has a school, as an appendage, which, though varying in their regulations, all have for their purpose, the promoting religion and teaching the ignorant. At this period the number of day scholars receiving gratuitous education, in Manchester is about 2,600, and the number of Sunday scholars about 26,000. The societies in Manchester and Salford, which have for their object the dissemination of religious knowledge, are, auxiliary bible and missionary societies; one for the promoting christianity amongst the jews; various religious tract societies, &c. The provident societies are numerous; and have each their attendant advantages. The establishments for ameliorating the condition of the sick poor are in extent proportionate with the population and casualties incident to the working class of a great manufacturing town.—'The Manchester General Infirmary and Dispensary,' the first in consequence, was built in 1755—'The Lunatic Asylum,' in 1765—'The House of Recovery or Fever Hospital' has existed since 1796—'The Lying-in-Hospital' was instituted in 1790—'The Strangers' Friend Society' in 1791—'The Samaritan Society' in 1824—an 'Institution for the Cure of Diseases of the Eye' in 1815—'The Lock Hospital' in 1819—'The Female Penitentiary' in 1822, and 'The School for the Deaf and Dumb,' in 1825. There are also several societies for clothing the poor; and frequently bazaars, the last and most splendid was held in the Town-hall, in the summer of 1827, for the sale of articles of utility and ornament, chiefly fabricated by ladies, the profits of which are applied occasionally to clothe the poor, as well as to replenish the funds of the national schools. Manchester and Salford are rich in public charities—the annual income of the borough-reeve's charities is £2,392. 18s. 1d; and other charities, distributed by various trustees, amount to £1,631. 13s. 4d. One of the effects of these charities is to diminish the pressure of the poor rates upon the inhabitants. The other charities, of ancient date, are the foundations of Bishop Oldham and Humphrey Cheetham, and the exhibitions of Mr. Hulme. The institutions for the promotion of literature, science and the fine arts, are 'The Literary and Philosophical Society of Manchester'—'The Society for the Promotion of Natural History,' with a museum of considerable value—an 'Agricultural Society,'—'The Floral and Horticultural Society'—and the 'Royal Manchester Institution,' which is now building in Mosley-street, upon a noble and liberal plan. The libraries in Manchester are exceedingly well furnished with works of ancient and modern literature, periodicals, &c. The principal of these establishments, after the College library, are the 'Portico,' in Mosley-st, with a news-room, a spacious and elegant edifice, completed in 1805, at a cost of £7,000—'The Law Library,' in Brown-street, instituted in 1820—an extensive 'Circulating Library,' in Exchange buildings—another in Pool-fold, and the 'Mechanics' and Apprentices' Library,' opened in 1825—'The Mechanics' Institute' is very flourishing, and has, since its commencement in 1826, been progressively increasing its members.

The PLACES OF PUBLIC AMUSEMENT consist of the Theatre, in Fountain-street, called the 'Theatre Royal'—the 'Minor Theatre,' in Spring gardens—the 'Assembly Rooms,' in Mosley-street—the 'Concert Rooms,' in Fountain-street—the 'Billiard Rooms,' in Mosley-street and Cross-street—the 'Diorama,' in Cooper-street—& the 'Public Baths,' at the infirmary and lying-in hospital, at once afford relaxation and conduce to health. The 'Races,' held on Kersall-moor, are in Whitsun-week: at this period immense numbers are collected together, and a great portion of the population of Manchester and the surrounding country may be said to be assembled at one place during this annual carnival.

The GOVERNMENT OF THE TOWN is vested in a boroughreeve and two constables; the chief business of the first of these is to preside at public meetings; the judicial functions connected with the police being executed by the constables and their deputies. The municipal government of Salford is also confided to a boroughreeve and two constables. The magnificent 'Town Hall,' in King-street, which is nearly finished, is intended for the transaction of municipal and police business, and for all meetings convened for purposes connected with such affairs. A court leet, under the jurisdiction of the lord of the manor, assembles at Easter and Michaelmas, at the latter period the boroughreeve and other officers are appointed: a court baron is held every third Wednesday for the recovery of debts and damages under 40s. and a court of requests, for the parish of Manchester, every second Wednesday, for the recovery of debts under £5. In addition to these courts, there are held the court for the hundred of Salford, every third Thursday, of which the Earl of Sefton is the steward; and the king's leets and courts of record twice a year. The county court is also now held in Manchester once a month, wherein debts to the amount of £10. may be recovered. A magistrate, who is a barrister, appointed by government, with a salary of £1,000. a year, sits every day (Sunday excepted) in the court-room of the New Bailey, for the administration of justice, in which he is generally assisted by one or more magistrates. The quarter sessions are held before a barrister, in the commission of the peace, who is chairman, and for which he is paid, by the hundred of Salford, £800. a year. The parochial concerns of this township are enormous, such might be expected from its great working population, relying upon the success or declination of the manufactures; which, however generally prosperous, still are subject to adverse fluctuation. The Manchester work-house is a large, spacious and handsome building, erected in 1792, upon a very eligible piece of high ground, near the confluence of the Irk with the Irwell, and was opened for the reception of the poor on the 14th of February, 1793: the greatest number admitted within its walls was in the year 1816-17, when sustenance was afforded to 526 persons.

THE IMPROVEMENTS OF THE TOWN, which have been progressively going on from the commencement of his present Majesty's reign, are upon a scale of magnitude, equalled only by the necessity which called for them, and the liberal and public spirit of those who prompted, & those who carried them into effect. The narrow avenues at the bottom of King-st, connecting it with Deansgate, have been widened, as have those at the lower end of Cannon-street, to Hanging-ditch. Piccadilly has received a valuable accession of carriage-way, by the moving the railing of the infirmary pond close to its brink. 'Market-street lane' is now no more, and the noble street, called Market-street, occupying its site, may be termed the Regent-street of the metropolis of Lancashire. The repairing the carriage-ways, upon the principle of Mr. M'Adam, has been executed in most parts of the great thoroughfares; and the accommodation of the pedestrian has not been forgotten, the foot-ways having been much improved, and, where necessary, increased in width. The gas and water works may also be placed in the rank of improvements, and are, in their respective uses, of the highest importance. The coal gas works of Manchester were established in 1817; and those for works for Salford in 1820. There is, besides, a portable gas company, for the supply of such houses where the main of the other works does not extend, or where they give that gas a preference. The Manchester and Salford water-works were established in 1809, and supplied from reservoirs in the township of Beswick, besides two additional ones, lately formed, in Gorton and Audenshaw.

The MARKETS of Manchester, not including Salford, or any of the other townships, are entirely under the regulation of the lord of the manor, both as to situation and number. The places where they are held are more to be noticed for their number than their spaciousness, and the convenience they afford to the buyer and seller. Every day in the week (Sundays excepted) provisions of all sorts are exposed for sale, but the regular market days are four, viz.: Tuesday, for the sale of provisions and manufactures, is considered the principal day in the week; Wednesday, for cattle; Thursday, for provisions and manufactures; Saturday, for provisions and manufactures; the last named day being the principal one for provisions. The market places are, the New Shambles, at the end of Bridge-st, for butchers' meat; the Pork market, being behind the same; the fruit markets Long Millgate and Shudehill; Smithfield market, Shudehill, for various commodities and provisions, and on Wednesdays for cattle; the London-road Shambles and market for fruit and vegetables. The Old Shambles, at the bottom of Market-street, are removed, and a new market is opened in Brown-street; the first market day was on the 10th of November, 1827. The poultry and butter market is held on Saturday, in Smithy-door. A new market-house, in Salford, was opened on the 5th of May, 1827, the first stone was laid on the 30th of August, 1825, by Lord Bexley, the chancellor of the duchy of Lancaster; it is a stone fronted edifice, and for its size, is well laid out for the purposes of sale and purchase of butchers' meat, fruit and vegetables. The ancient fair, called 'Acres Fair,' is now held at Knott-mill, on the 1st of October. The other Manchester fair is on Easter Monday, held at the same place. There are two chartered fairs held in Salford annually, the first commencing on Whit-Monday, and the latter on the 17th of November; these continue twenty-one days, for the sale of woollen cloths, the two first days of each fair being also for toys, pedlery, &c.

POPULATION.—The parish of Manchester contains thirty townships and chapelries, viz:

In 1717 the town of Manchester is stated to have contained 8,000 inhabitants, and in 1757, in Manchester and Salford, 19,839; these are mere probable calculations; but in 1774 a census gave to Manchester 22,371, & to the whole parish 41,032. The subsequent returns to parliament were as follows:—

	1801	1811	1821
	PERSONS.	PERSONS.	PERSONS.

Salford.....	13,611	19,114	25,772
Chorlton-row..	675	2,581	8,209

The whole parish contained, in 1801, 102,300 inhabitants; in 1811, 136,260; and in 1821, 38,414 families, consisting of 187,031 persons. Of the 38,414 families, 34,977 were returned as employed in trade, manufactures, or handicraft business.

The actual population of the town of Manchester may be said to embrace with it the inhabitants of SALFORD, ARDWICK, BROUGHTON, CHORLTON-ROW, HULME and PENDLETON, which last-named place, although in the parish of Eccles, must be considered as contributing to the population of Manchester. In 1821, the total number of inhabitants in these several places was 156,504; but from the increase of manufacturing establishments and other local causes which have taken place since the last census, it is estimated that the population at this period may be taken at nearly 200,000 persons.

MIDDLETON, BIRCH AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

MIDDLETON is a market town and parish, in the hundred of Salford, in the deanery of Manchester, and archdeaconry of Chester; 5 miles s.s.w. of Rochdale, 6 N. N. E. of Manchester, and 192 from London. Baron Suffield, of Suffield, in the county of Norfolk, is the present lord of the manor, who holds, in October annually, courts leet and baron, at which time two constables are chosen, for the government of the parish. The parish church of Middleton, which is dedicated to St. Leonard, is an ancient pile, but no record has been discovered from which can be fixed the period of its erection. The south side, from an inscription, appears to have been built in later times, about 1520, by Richard Assheton. The choir has three aisles, of which the middle and north belong to the rector, and the south to the lords of Middleton; a monumental inscription to that ancient family and its branches, and many curious monuments of the rectors of this church, principally descendants of the Asshetons, are in the chancel, the window of which is ornamented with some fine old stained glass, formerly belonging to 'The Hall.' A screen of seven compartments, in bold relief, divides the nave from the chancel, which, as well as the great east window, is ornamented by the arms of several noble families, who are and were resident in the neighbourhood. The tower of this church is low, with a superstructure of wood, the sandy foundation being deemed not sufficiently firm to sustain an erection of entire stone. A handsome and well-toned organ has within these few years been added. The living of Middleton is a rectory, of which Lord Suffield is the patron, and the present incumbent is the Rev. John Haughton. Here are chapels for the methodists, Swedenborgians, Lady Huntingdon's connexion, independents, and unitarians; attached to nearly all these places of worship are schools, which collectively impart education to upwards of 1,800 children of both sexes. "Queen Elizabeth's Free School" was founded in 1572, and endowed by Alexander Nowell, dean of St. Paul's, and the incorporated governors are the principal and fellows of Brazenose College, Oxford. Lord Suffield has a seat here; and about one mile hence is the seat of R. G. Hopwood, Esq. The ancient seat of the Ashtons, 'Middleton Hall,' is now the residence of T. Smith, Esq. agent to the lord of the manor; and the park, in which formerly herded many deer, has been converted into farms. The spinning of cotton and manufacturing of different fabrics from that material, is conducted here to considerable extent; and there are besides, some establishments in the silk trade, and bleaching works; as also extensive dye works of Mr. Beattie. Coal mines are in the immediate neighbourhood; and about one mile from the town passes the canal from Hull to Manchester. The weekly market is on Friday; fairs are, the first Tuesday after the 11th of March, the first Tuesday after the 15th of April, and the 2nd Thursday after the 29th of Sept. but there is very little business done either at the markets or fairs. The population of the whole parish of Middleton, in 1821, was 12,793, including 5,809 persons resident in the township.

BIRCH, a village, in the township of Hopwood, and parish of Middleton, two miles and a half w.n.w. of the latter town, is an improving place. A large and commodious national school room of brick has been recently erected in the township of Heap; and a parliamentary church is now building, in the township of Hopwood.

POST OFFICE, Rochdale road, MIDDLETON, Joseph Ball, Post Master.---Letters from MANCHESTER arrive at ten in the morning and at eight in the evening, and are despatched at half-past five in the morning and half-past three in the afternoon. Letters from ROCHDALE, &c. arrive at half-past five in the morning and half-past three in the afternoon, and are despatched at ten in the morning and eight in the evening. NEWCHURCH, BACUP, CRAWSHAW-BOOTH, ROSSENDALE AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

NEWCHURCH-IN-ROSENDALE, a very populous and rich chapelry, in the parish of Whalley and hundred of Blackburn, is 201 miles from London, by Bury, about 8 miles from Rochdale, the like distance from Bury, and 3 miles from Haslingden and Colne. The place is said to have taken its name from the original church, then called 'Newchurch'; the houses which soon after were reared around it forming the town. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, was originally built in 1512, since which period it has been several times repaired and enlarged; lastly, rebuilt in 1825, and consecrated on the 12th September, 1826. The living is a perpetual curacy in the gift of the vicar of Whalley, and incumbency of the Rev. Philip Abbott, whose curate is the Rev. David Rathbone. Here are chapels for the Wesleyan methodists and unitarians: a poor house, a Sunday school; and a free grammar school, founded about the year 1701, ably conducted by Mr. John Bentley: there is also a methodist Sunday school, recently erected: and the poor of Newchurch are indebted to several munificent charitable bequests for the relief administered to them at several periods in the year. The manufacturing establishments here are numerous, various, and extensive, giving employment to a great number of hands in cotton and worsted spinning, and the perfecting fabrics from those materials; especially stockings, baizes, and other coarse woollen goods; the former article taking its name from the place where it was originally manufactured---Bocking, in Essex. The river Irwell passes through the valley, on the banks of which are placed several mills, principally used in the production of the before-named articles. Plenty of coal mines are in the neighbourhood, and also quarries of free-stone, slate, &c. There are two fairs in the year held here, viz. on the 29th of April, for cattle; and on the 24th of June, the latter being the principal one, and is for cattle, pigs, articles of clothing, hardware, pedlery, &c. The population of the chapelry of NEWCHURCH-IN-ROSENDALE, with DEADWIN-CLOUGH, in 1801, was 5,046; in 1811 it had increased to 6,930; and in 1821 it amounted to upwards of 8,500 persons.

POST OFFICE, NEWCHURCH, James Taylor, Post Master.—A horse post arrives from ROCHDALE every morning at eight, and is despatched at twelve at noon.—BACUP, George Ashworth, Post Master.—A horse post arrives from ROCHDALE every morning at seven, and is despatched at one in the afternoon.

NEWTON, AND ASHTON-IN-MACKERFIELD,

WINWICK, GOLBORNE, LOWTON AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

NEWTON-IN-MACKERFIELD is a small borough town and chapelry, in the parish of Winwick, and in the hundred of West Derby, five miles north of Warrington and seven south of Wigan. Newton is a borough by prescription, having enjoyed the elective franchise since the first year of the reign of Queen Elizabeth. The right of election is exclusively vested in the freemen or burgesses of the borough, that is,
 of any person possessing a freehold estate therein of the value of 40s. a year or upwards, of whom the number is about sixty. The present members are Thomas Alcock, Esq. and Thomas Legh, Esq. The returning officers are the steward of the borough, and bailiff of the manor. These officers hold a court leet and court baron in the months of April, May, and October, and in them is vested the government of the borough; in the same court small debts are recoverable. The parochial chapel, which is dedicated to St. Peter, was erected in 1682, at the expense of Richard Legh, Esq.; his descendant, Thomas Legh, Esq.
 M. P. is the patron of the living, and the Rev. Peter Legh is the present incumbent. Here is a free grammar school, with an endowment of £50. a year,
 which, like the chapel of Newton, is in the patronage of Thomas Legh, Esq. who is also lord of the manor.
 There are besides church Sunday schools, which educate upwards of 400 children. The principal manufacture of the place are fustians. Here is an old hall, built of wood, with much painted glass still remaining in its windows; it stands on a rocky foundation, and behind it the rock is hollowed out, in a very singular manner, appearing to have had subterraneous passages, which, by removing the surface of the rock, are now laid open. At a place called the Red Bank, near Newton, in August, 1648, detachments of Cromwell's army defeated a party of Highlanders, on their march from Preston; and the greater part of the prisoners were hanged in a field near the scene of action, which still bears the name of Gallows Cross. Newton had formerly a market, which has long been disused, though the market cross is still standing. Fairs are held 17th May, for horned cattle, 18th May, for horses, 11th August, for horned cattle, and 12th of August, for horses. The borough contained, according to the returns in 1821, 1,643 inhabitants.

ASHTON-IN-MACKERFIELD, or Ashton-in the Wil- lows, is a large and populous village and chapelry in the same parish and hundred as Newton, three miles N. N. W. of that town, situated in the centre of a lively manufacturing district, and containing in itself some considerable cotton spinning establishments and fus-tian manufacturers. It is also noted for making hinges and locks. Besides the episcopal chapel, here are a friends' meeting house, a methodist chapel, and one for the Roman catholics. In 1821 the chapelry contained about 5,000 inhabitants.

WINWICK is a village, township, and parish, in the hundred of West Derby, three miles north of Warrington; containing an ancient church, dedicated to St. Oswald, the living of which, with its dependancies, is estimated at upwards of £3,000. a year, and is enjoyed by the rector, the Rev. John James Hornby:
 who is also patron of a laudable custom existing in the parish, that of allowing occasionally, to a certain number of poor labouring people of piety and general good conduct one year's rent of their cottages; and this badge of honour to the donor and receiver is to be seen over the doors of those cottages whose inhabitants have been deemed to merit this benevolent distinction, by a painted board, shewing the period when they were thus benefited.—The parish of Winwick contains several populous manufacturing villages; and in the whole a population of 16,229
 persons, but the township itself does not claim exceeding 700 of that number.

GOLBORNE is a small village and township in the parish of Winwick, one mile and a half north of Newton, containing about 1,300 inhabitants.

LOWTON is a populous chapelry in the same parish
 as Golborne, two miles north east of Newton; containing nearly 2,000 inhabitants.

OLDHAM,

CHADDERTON, CROMPTON, ROYTON, GREENACRES MOOR, HOLLINWOOD, FAILSWORTH, LEES, MOSSLEY AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

OLDHAM is a township and parochial chapelry (connected with Prestwich), in the hundred of Salford, in the deanery of Manchester, and in the arch-deaconry of Chester, 191 miles from London, 17 s.w. of Huddersfield, 7 s.s.e. of Rochdale, and the like distance n.e. of Manchester. The town is situated on rising ground, near the source of the Irk, and is washed on the east by a branch of the Medlock: these streams were of much more importance before the general introduction of steam engines, which have materially diminished the necessity of water-power. The increase of manufacturing establishments in this chapelry within half a century is truly astonishing: rather more than sixty years ago there was not a cotton mill in it, and at present there are nearly seventy, wholly employed in spinning cotton, and all worked by steam: within the same limits there are upwards of one hundred and forty steam engines used in the various processes of manufacturing and mining. The goods chiefly made here are, fustians, velveteens, and cotton and woollen cords; but the original staple trade of Oldham, and for which it has been for many ages distinguished, is the manufacture of hats, which certainly existed here as early as the beginning of the fifteenth century. The coal mines in this neighbourhood are also a most important branch of trade, and give employment to a vast number of persons: the quality of the coal obtains for it a preference in the Manchester market; and the quantity dug up yearly from the numerous beds is immense, and the supply seems inexhaustible. The trade of the neighbourhood, both in coal and in the various branches of manufacture are essentially promoted by the inland navigation; and the Oldham canal, which commences at Hollinwood, and communicates with Manchester, Ashton-under-Line and Stockport, as well as the Rochdale canal, which passes through Chadderton, combine to enrich and improve this populous trading district. To these advantages may be added one other of high consideration, viz. the vicinity of Oldham to Manchester, the great mart for cotton goods; and where so vast a consumption of the mineral produce of this place is so continually going on. The church of Oldham was originally but a small and simple edifice, suited to the then population and means of the inhabitants: as both increased it was enlarged; but as it continually required repairs and alterations, and became inadequate to the accommodation of the accumulating number of parishioners, it was at length determined to be taken down, and an act was obtained to erect a more convenient and suitable church upon its site. On the 16th of October an interesting and gratifying procession took place, of the principal authorities of the town, the children of all the schools, &c., to witness the laying of the first stone: the inscription upon the plate which covered the orifice containing the different current coins struck in his present Majesty's reign, was as follows:—

'The first stone of this church, dedicated to St. Paul, erected on the site of the ancient parochial chapel of Oldham, by the trustees appointed by act of parliament, for taking down and rebuilding the same church, was laid on Tuesday, the 16th day of October, in the eighth year of the reign of his Majesty George IV., by the Right Honourable Thomas Earl of Wilton, attended by Charles James Lord Bishop of Chester, the Rev. James Lyon, rector of Prestwich-cum-Oldham; the Rev. John Fallowfield, curate of Oldham; Jonathan Mellor, Joseph Needham, John Kenworthy and John Cooper, churchwardens of the respective townships of Oldham, Chadderton, Crompton, and Royton, MDCCCXXVII. Richard Lane, architect.'

St. Peter's chapel, in Chapel-street, High-street, was built in 1765; and in 1804 was enlarged, when it was provided with a fine toned organ: the incumbent is the Rev. Wm. Winter. The other places for religious worship in Oldham are, the methodist chapel, in Manchester-st.; the baptist chapel, at the top of the same street; the unitarian chapel, in Lord-street; one for the independents, in Queen-street; and the independent methodist meeting-house, in George-street, for the seceders from the methodists. The principal places of worship have Sunday-schools attached, which, together, give instruction to more than four thousand children of both sexes. Here is also a free grammar school, situate in School-croft, founded by James Assheton, Esq., of Chadderton-hall, in 1611. The Bible society has an auxiliary branch at Oldham; connected with which is a ladies' Bible association. Amongst the improvements most conspicuous in point of utility, which have recently taken place here, are the establishments for the supplying the town with water, and lighting it by night with gas. A police act has also been obtained lately; and the town has received the additional benefit of being protected by eleven watchmen, duly appointed. There is no regular market-day here, but Saturday is observed as a sort of vegetable and flesh market. There are three annual fairs for cattle, horses, sheep and pedlery, viz. on the 2nd of May and 8th of July, and on the first Wednesday after the 12th of October. The chapelry of Oldham, which includes CHADDERTON, CROMPTON, ROYTON and the township of OLDHAM, contained, in 1801, 21,677 inhabitants; in 1811, 29,479; and by the census of 1821, 38,201 persons. The township of OLDHAM contained, in 1801, a population of 12,024 persons; in 1811, 16,690; and in 1821, 21,662 inhabitants.

CHADDERTON township is two miles north-west of Oldham, forming a right angle with Royton. 'Chadderton-hall' was the birth-place of Dr. Lawrence Chadderton, who lived at the period of the reformation, and was amongst the number of the principal reformers: this hall is now fast going to decay. Near to the hall is an episcopal chapel, built in 1765. Chadderton township contained, in 1821, 5,124 inhabitants.

CROMPTON, a village, three miles north of Oldham, in the most northern part of the parish, is a populous and flourishing township. An ancient free chapel, belonging to the establishment, stands at Shaw, in this township. 6,482 persons form the population of this place.

ROYTON chapelry and village, which is increasing in population, and rapidly assuming the appearance of a regular town, is seated in a deep valley. Here, as in most parts of the parish, cotton manufactures are extensive; in addition to which valuable branch of trade, coal is found under a considerable portion of the land. The place of worship here is the small episcopal chapel of St. Paul's, erected in 1754, on land piously bestowed by Thomas Percival, Esq. of Royton-hall, which mansion was long in the possession of the Byron family, ancestors of the truly illustrious poet of that name. After Mr. Percival, the hall was possessed by Sir Joseph Radcliffe, Bart., but it is now falling into decay. A meeting-house for the society of friends is at Twif-lane, the community of which is said to be coeval with the foundation of quakerism. This chapelry, in 1821, contained about 5,000 inhabitants, but its population has increased since that period.

GREENACRES, a village, in the township of Oldham, two miles east of that town, has so much increased its population within a few years, that the erection of a place of public worship has for some time been considered a most requisite measure, for the accommodation of the inhabitants in this part of the chapelry. The commissioners appointed by parliament for the building of new churches having conceded thereto, the first stone was laid of a new church, on the 3rd of September, 1827, and the following is the inscription on the plate that covered the aperture in the foundation stone, wherein were deposited, according to custom, certain coins of his present Majesty:—

'The first stone of this church, dedicated to St. James, erected by the commissioners appointed by parliament, was laid by Jas. Lees, Esq., of Clarkfield, attended by Jonathan Mellor, churchwarden; George Wright, Wm. Barlow, Wm. Wrigley, Daniel Hilton, constables; James Lees and James Potter, overseers; on Monday the 3rd of September, in the eighth year of the reign of his Majesty George the Fourth. MDCCCXXVII. Francis Goodwin, architect.'

Here is a chapel for the independents, with a Sunday-school attached, in which about three hundred children are educated. A subscription news' and reading room is established at the Hat and Feathers Inn, which is well supplied with newspapers, &c., and is attended by a respectable number of subscribers. The population returns for this place are made up with those of Oldham.

HOLLINWOOD, a village, in the township of Oldham, is two miles south-west of that town, and its population returns are made up therewith.

FAILSWORTH, a village, in the parish of Manchester, lying between that town and Oldham, four miles from the former and three from the latter place: contained, in 1821, a population of 3,358 persons.

LEES is an improving and rather populous village, in the division of Knott Lanes and parish of Ashton-under-Line, about a mile and a half east from Oldham, on the turnpike road leading from that town to Saddleworth and Huddersfield. A short distance from this village is Lees spa, a chalybeate spring, efficacious in cases where powerful tonic medicines are required. The population of this place is returned with the division of Knott Lanes.

MOSSLEY is a populous village, in the division of Hartshead, three miles north of Ashton, in which the manufacture of woollen and cotton goods is carried on to a considerable extent. In 1824 two annual fairs were established for cattle; one on the 21st of June, and another on the last Monday in October.

ORMSKIRK

IS a compact, well built market town, of an ancient aspect, in the hundred of West Derby, 209 miles from London, 13 from Liverpool, 12 from Wigan and 18 from Preston. The trade of this town is not considerable, but there are several hat manufactories and roperies, and the cotton and silk manufacture has also been introduced. The church, dedicated to St.
Peter and Paul, is very ancient, and will not escape
the notice of a stranger, from the singularity of its possessing two steeples, or rather a tower and a steeple: (the spire of the latter has been recently rebuilt) tradition accounts for this peculiarity by informing us, that the fair founders, two sisters, named Orme, disagreeing in their predilections, one preferring a tower and the other a steeple, accommodated

their difference by giving it both; but the more probable story is, that the tower was built for the reception of eight fine bells, which, after the suppression of the monasteries, were removed from the neighbouring priory of Burscough. The living is a vicarage, in the patronage of the Earl of Derby, the present incumbent is the Rev. Joshua Thomas Horton, M. A.; and since the suppression of the above named priory, this church has attained considerable renown, as being the depository of the ashes of the illustrious race of Stanleys. The places of worship, in this parish besides the church, are Skelmersdale episcopal chapel, built in 1776, by subscription, and greatly enlarged
in 1823; the presbyterian chapel, in Aughton-street, erected in 1783, the methodist chapel, in Chapel-lane, built in 1810, for the new connexion of Wesleyan methodists, and a chapel, lately erected for dissenters, of the independent denomination. The Roman catholics form a very numerous body in this town and neighbourhood, and they have a large chapel consecrated to their use in the adjacent parish of Aughton. In the Church-yard is a free grammar school, erected in 1614, by Henry Croft, Esq. : and in Church-street seventy boys and fifty girls receive gratuitous instruction, on the national system, in a school-room erected ed in 1724, by James, Earl of Derby, for a blue coat school. A dispensary has existed more than a century here, and in 1822 a bank for savings was established, the funds of which, in 1826, amounted to £11,463. 5s. The market day is Thursday, and there is a fair held annually on Whit-Monday. The parish of Ormskirk, including its six townships, contained, in 1801, 8,251 inhabitants, and by the census of 1821, 1,208, of which number about 4,000 were of the township of Ormskirk.

POST OFFICE, Burscough-street, Mrs. Mary Wignall, Post Mistress.—The mail arrives from LONDON, by way of PRESTON, at forty minutes past six in the morning and departs at six o'clock in the evening. The auxiliary mail from LIVERPOOL arrives at forty minutes past nine in the morning and departs at forty minutes past six in the evening.

PADIHAM AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

PADIHAM, a large village and chapelry, is situated 3 miles & a half west of Burnley, seven from Clithero, and about nine from Blackburn, in the parish of Whalley and hundred of Blackburn, seated on an eminence, springing from the north bank of the Calder. The church, dedicated to St. Leonard, and one of the oldest in the extensive parish of Whalley, is a rectory, in the gift of Le Gendre N. Starkie, Esq. M.P.; and the Rev. S. J. C. Adamson is the incumbent. There are also chapels for the methodists and unitarians; a free school and three Sunday schools. The Leeds and Liverpool canal passes near to this place, affording means for the transmission of coal and stone, which abounds in this neighbourhood. A fair is held on the 12th of August, chiefly for pedlery. The cotton trade in this village is advancing to importance; Messrs. Helms have a large establishment, and there are several other respectable concerns, besides some print works, altogether employing a great portion of the population, which is said to have considerably increased since 1821, when there were about 3,000 inhabitants in the chapelry.

POULTON AND BLACKPOOL.

POULTON-IN-THE-FYLDE, a market town and parish, in the hundred and deanery of Amounderness, and in the archdeaconry of Richmond, 234 miles from London, 48 from Liverpool and Manchester, 17 from Preston and 8 from Kirkham; is a small port, under Preston, and one of great antiquity. The church, dedicated to St. Chad, is erected upon the site of the old edifice, which, having stood nearly seven hundred years, was taken down in 1751. The other places of worship are for the independents and Wesleyan methodists, Roman catholics and quakers, each of which sect have a meeting-house. This place is much frequented in the bathing season; and its real population is upon the increase; in 1821, 4,031 persons were in the whole parish, of which number 1,011 belonged to the township of Poulton.

BLACKPOOL, 4 miles south-west of Poulton, in the parish of Bispham, is a celebrated bathing place on the coast of the Irish sea. The peaty coloured pool, which gives name to the place, is at the south-end of Blackpool, near the house called Fox Hall, once the residence of the Tyldesleys, but now a farm house. The firm and smooth sand renders the operation of bathing very safe and agreeable, which is regulated here with peculiar and rigorous attention to decency. For the accommodation and recreation of visitors and the respectable inhabitants, there are the news and coffee rooms, a library; and at the hotels, during the season, assemblies are given. In 1821 an episcopal chapel was erected here, subject to the parochial jurisdiction of Bispham. About 800 inhabitants form the population of Blackpool, exclusive of visitors.

PRESCOT,

AND THE VILLAGES OF HUYTON, KNOWSLEY AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

PRESCOT, a moderate sized market town, in the hundred of West Derby, in the deanery of Warrington, and archdeaconry of Chester, is 197 miles from London, 28 from Manchester, 10 from Warrington and 8 from Liverpool. It is pleasantly situated on high ground, on the great road between Liverpool and Manchester; and, like Whitehaven, is built over coal mines; many being worked in every direction round it, and some of them at the very edge of the town: this article of fuel is of course very cheap, benefitting essentially the manufactories in the neighbourhood by the abundant supply, and giving employment to upwards of 2,000 persons, in obtaining it from the collieries of this parish. Prescott has long been noted for the manufacture of watch tools and movements, as also parts of the watch called motion work: the small files made here, are said to be the best in the world, and great numbers are annually exported. Several manufactories of coarse earthenware are established here; the most extensive of which, are those of Messrs. Webster, Prescott Brook, and Messrs. Spencers, in Fazakerley-street; the latter concern being famous for the making sugar moulds. The cotton business, though not conducted here to any great extent, forms part of the employment of the labouring classes. Petty sessions are held once a month; a court leet annually, on Corpus Christi; when a coroner for the manor and liberty is appointed; and a court baron is held six times a year. The provost and scholars of King's College are lords of the manor, which is copyhold; and Mr. John Heyes, solicitor, is the steward; who presides at a manorial court for the recovery of debts to any amount. The inhabitants of Prescott have always claimed to be exempt from serving on all juries, except within their own manor, since Henry VII.; as also from the payment of tolls to all public markets; besides other privileges nearly forgotten, or not made available. The parish church is dedicated to St. Mary; the living of which is a vicarage in charge, in the patronage of the lords of the manor, and in the incumbency of the Rev. C. G. T. Driffeld. Besides the church, there are chapels of ease at St. Helens, Farnworth, Rainford and Great Sankey, all within the parish; and the unitarians, independents and methodists, have each a place of worship at Prescott. There are several alms-houses; erected in 1708, well endowed by Oliver Lyme, Esq.; and some other charities. The free school in this town, which educates about thirty boys upon the foundation, was originally supported by parochial rates, since the ceasing of such (about a century ago) several benefactions have continued to support the establishment. The Liverpool and Manchester rail-way, now making, will pass through the township of Whiston, about one mile south of Prescott. Many seats of nobility are in this parish, amongst which are, Knowsley-hall, the seat of the Earl of Derby—the Marq. of Salisbury, at Childwell—Croxeth-hall, the seat of the Earl of Sefton, &c. There are two markets weekly, on Tuesday & Saturday, and a fortnight fair for cattle, from Shrove Tuesday to the first Tuesday in May. The annual fairs are held on Ash Wednesday, the Wednesday after Corpus Christi, 24th and 25th August, 21st October, and on the 1st of November. The population of the whole parish of Prescott, in 1801, amounted to 17,152 persons, and by the census of 1821, 22,811, of which number 4,468 were inhabitants of the township of Prescott.

HUYTON is a village, township and parish, in the same hundred as Prescott, one mile and a half s. w. of that town. The parish church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient building, the living of which is a discharged rectory, in the patronage of the Earl of Derby, and incumbency of the Rev. Ellis Ashton. The whole parish contained, in 1821, 3,046 inhabitants, of which number about 900 belonged to the township of Huyton.

KNOWSLEY, a township and village, in the parish of Huyton, 3 miles n. w. of Prescott, is to be noticed, as containing Knowsley-hall, the principal seat of the Earls of Derby; and the dignity of the noble and ancient house of Stanley is here supported in a manner worthy of the first family in the county. The township contained, in 1821, 1,174 inhabitants.

PRESTON,

WALTON-LE-DALE, BAMBER BRIDGE, LEYLAND & NEIGHBOURHOODS.

PRESTON is a borough, market-town and parish, in the hundred of Amounderness, and in the arch-deaconry of Richmond, 217 miles from London, 31 N.N.E. of Liverpool, the like distance N.W. of Manchester, 22 S.S.E. of Lancaster, 18 N.N.E. of Ormskirk, 11 S.S.E. of Garstang, and 9 north of Chorley. It is situated on an eminence, to the north of the river Ribble, and is said to have risen from the ruins of an ancient city, called Ribchester, which is now an inconsiderable village, in the neighbourhood; and to take its name, Priest's town, from its having then been the residence of considerable numbers of churchmen; and the present names of the streets afford sanction to this etymology; as, the 'Churchgate,' the 'Friargate,' &c. This borough has the honour to enjoy no fewer than thirteen royal original charters, the first of which was granted by Henry II., and the two last in the reign of Charles II. Preston is a borough by prescription as well as by charter, and returns two members to parliament: the present representatives are, the Hon. Edward Geoffrey Smith Stanley and John Wood, Esq.; the right of voting is in 'all the male inhabitants' of the age of twenty-one years and upwards, who have resided during the last six months in the town, and have not, for the twelve months immediately preceding the election, been chargeable to any parish as paupers. The number of voters at the last election for the borough was 4,000; and the mayor and two bailiffs are the returning officers. The town is governed by a mayor, four aldermen and seventeen common councilmen, with the recorder and town clerk. A court of record for the trial of causes is held every Friday, and a sessions quarterly, for the punishment of felonies, &c. committed within the borough; before the mayor and aldermen, and the recorder, or town clerk. Every twentieth year a guild merchant, or kind of Jubilee is held here, which begins in the last week of August, and formerly continued a month, but its duration in 1822 was but a fortnight, when Nicholas Grimshaw, Esq. was the mayor; who has been elected five times to that honourable civic office. The guild-hall, a handsome building, stands in the centre of the town, near the Market-place, and fronts Fishergate, built of brick, containing a news' room and council chamber, together with the court room, for trying causes cognizable in the town, and used as the hustings for the purpose of receiving votes for electing members of parliament. The new cupola, is built of free-stone, & is as superior piece of architecture mounting a pedestal, which supports its massy head, consisting of four Ionic pilasters at each angle; upon the base, between the pilasters, are laticed windows, formed with mouldings after the Norman style, with round heads, and above this, next the cornice, a clock appears, with four dials, facing the four cardinal points; the cap of the cupola is mounted by a vane of gilt work, representing the figure of a lamb couchant. The original Moot-hall fell down into a heap of ruins, on the morning of the 3rd of June, 1780. A ball had been held in it the preceding evening, and the ladies and gentlemen had only separated a few hours before this catastrophe happened. The principal law officers for the county palatine are, the vice chancellor, the registrar of the chancellor, the curitor, the clerk of the crown, and the clerk of the peace, the prothonotary and the sheriff have their respective offices in this town, except during the assizes, when they attend at Lancaster. The court of chancery for the county palatine, and the quarter sessions for the hundreds of Amounderness, Leyland, and Blackburn are held here by adjournment from Lancaster, where they commence for the county. The general sessions, meetings of the deputy lieutenants, and many other county meetings take place here. The county court for trial of causes under forty shillings, and above that sum to an indefinite amount, is held here every fourth Tuesday, before the under sheriff.

The public structures devoted to the purposes of religious worship are, the ancient church of St. John's (formerly St. Wilfrid's) which is a vicarage, in the patronage of Sir Henry Philip Hoghton, and incumbency of the Rev. Roger Carus Wison; St. George's chapel, the present minister of which is the Rev. R. Harris; Trinity church, in the incumbency of the Rev. Thomas Raven; St. Peter's, the Rev. R. Henry; and St. Paul's, the Rev. B. Russell. The dissenters from the established church have seven places of worship, viz. for the methodists, independents, baptists and unitarians, a chapel for each; the catholics have also two chapels, and the society of friends a meeting house. The charitable institutions for the promotion of education are, the free grammar school, an ancient foundation, under the patronage of the corporation; the blue coat school, national school, catholic school, methodist school, and various Sunday-schools; the latter excellent establishments, educating upwards of 3,000 children. There are several societies in Preston for the promoting religion and affording relief to the poor both in age and sickness: amongst these may be included, Bible, tract and missionary societies, dispensaries, alms-houses, a 'benevolent society;' several provident institutions, or 'benefit societies,' &c. Here is a valuable library, bequeathed by Dr. Shepherd, one belonging to the mechanics & apprentices, & two good news' rooms. Two newspapers are published here on Saturday, viz. the 'Chronicle' and 'Pilot,' and a periodical, called the 'Protestant Guardian,' monthly. The places of public amusement are, the theatre, assembly rooms, and cock-pit. There are also billiard rooms and public baths, and races are held annually on the moor. Avenham walk, situated on the summit of a hill, rising from the banks of the Ribble, is one of the places of public resort for pleasure and exercise, and is a most delightful promenade, the property of the corporation, and kept in order at their cost. The prospect from hence is as extensive as diversified, and embraces all the various beauties which a perfect landscape may be said to possess. Half a century ago Preston could not be noted as a manufacturing town, and for ages previous it was more remarkable for the residence of independent persons and its claims to gentility, than to the production of articles deemed so essentially necessary to adorn the rich and clothe all ranks. The rapid strides of science and art, rendered subservient to machinery and manufactures in general, have, of late years, overtaken and included Preston amongst the manufacturing towns of Lancashire. The cotton trade is now carried on to a very considerable extent; and although it labours under the disadvantage of being at a material distance from the mines; yet the central situation of the town, and the united advantages of river and canal navigation, joining with the skill, capital and enterprize of the principal manufacturers, have placed Preston in a more conspicuous and elevated point of view, than at the period when trade was only carried on within it for local convenience. With the aid of spring tides, which flow higher than the bridge at Walton, vessels of 150 tons burden can navigate the Ribble as far as the quay at Preston-marsh, but the Ribble is capable of much improvement. In this river is a very ancient fishery, belonging to the borough of Preston, within the boundary of its jurisdiction; and it is famous for salmon, smelts, plaice and eels. Preston is approached from the south by Walton bridge, and from the west by Penwortham bridge, both over the Ribble. The houses in the town are chiefly well built, and, together with the neighbouring townships, is the residence of many opulent families. The principal market-place is a spacious well-paved square, in the centre of which is an obelisk, surmounted by a large glass vase, lighted at night with gas, which illuminates the whole area. The chief market-day is on Saturday; but there are also markets on Wednesday and Friday, for fish, butter and vegetables. There are four annual fairs here, viz. the great horse fair, in the week ending on the first Sunday after Epiphany, which is called 'great Saturday;' the Spring fair, of three days, commencing 27th March; the Summer fair, of eight days, commencing on the 26th August; and the Winter fair, of five days, commencing on the 7th of November. In 1801, the whole parish of Preston contained 14,300 inhabitants; in 1811, 19,528; and, by the census of 1821, 27,300 persons: in 1801 the borough of Preston contained 11,887 inhabitants; in 1811, 17,065; and in 1821, 24,570, having more than doubled its population in twenty years.

WALTON-LE-DALE is a chapelry, and a populous interesting village, in the hundred and parish of Blackburn, situate at its western extremity, the village being about two miles south-east of Preston, at the confluence of the Ribble and the Derwent rivers. It is recorded of this place, that in the year 1701, certain persons of note, amongst whom were the Duke of Norfolk, the Earl of Derwentwater, Sir Thomas Sherburne, Sir Wm. Pennington, and other of the gentry of the jacobite party, incorporated themselves, by the designation of The Mayor and Corporation of the ancient borough of Walton. The place of rendezvous was the 'Unicorn,' a mean public house, in the village; where, although their transactions partook of the character of the ludicrous, yet a purpose political was concealed. They kept a register, and had a mace, sword of state, and large staves, ornamented with silver. The rebellion of 1715 thinned the number of the corporate members, but the mockery existed till the year 1800, when it altogether ceased; and the register, with the staves, came into the possession of Sir Henry Philip Houghton, Bart. Walton is memorable from the great battle fought on the 17th August, 1648, between Oliver Cromwell and Duke Hamilton; and also of another, in 1715, between Parson, or General Wood, of Chowbent, who, at the head of his congregation, defended the pass of the Ribble against the Scots rebels. The church of Walton is delightfully seated upon an eminence, the chancel of which contains a number of monuments chiefly to the Houghton family. The increase of population, within the last twenty years, has amounted to more than 2,000 persons, and is attributed to the number of manufacturing concerns continually springing up in this chapelry, which contained, in 1821, 5,740 inhabitants.

BAMBER BRIDGE, three miles S.S.E. of Preston, is a village, in the township of Walton-le-dale, and the returns of its population are made up therewith.

LEYLAND, a township, parish and village, giving name to the hundred and deanery in which it lies, is distant four miles and a half north-west of Chorley, and five and a half south of Preston. At a very early period the lordship was of great importance, and a royal possession of great extent, being held by King Edward the Confessor. At a subsequent period, John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster, enjoyed much of the land; and the Farrington's, now of Shaw-hall, afterwards became the possessors. The church, which is dedicated to St. Andrew, is built without a single pillar, like to Westminster-hall; and consists of one arch, containing an area of sixty-five by thirty-three feet. The benefice is a vicarage, in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. Richard G. Baldwin, M.A. The parish contains two chapelries and seven townships, and in 1821, 12,959 inhabitants, 3,173 of that number being in the village of Leyland.

RADCLIFFE, PRESTWICH,

PILKINGTON, STAND, UNSWORTH, WHITEFIELD AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

RADCLIFFE is a village, township and parish, in the hundred of Salford and deanery of Manchester, three miles s.s.w. of Bury. The population of this parish, its interest and welfare, are exclusively dependent upon the manufactures conducted therein, which consist chiefly of gingham, checks, nankeens, ticks and fustians. At RADCLIFFE BRIDGE, in this township, are some establishments for cotton spinning, and smallware manufactures; and there are print works in the parish and its vicinity. The parish church of Radcliffe is an ancient building, the living of which is a rectory, in the patronage of the Earl of Wilton, and incumbency of the Rev. Thomas Foxley. St. Thomas' chapel of ease is a modern building, opened in 1821; the erection of which was imperatively called for by the progressive increase of parishioners: the present minister of this chapel is the Rev. Thos. Parkinson. The Bolton and Bury canal passes near the village, a great convenience to those connected with the coal mines, several being worked in the neighbourhood. RADCLIFFE parish contained, in 1821, about 3,100 inhabitants, but the number has increased since that period.

PRESTWICH, or Prestwich-cum-Oldham, is a village and township, in an exceedingly populous and manufacturing parish of the same name, the village being about five miles n.n.w. of Manchester, and in the same hundred as Radcliffe. The church is a fine old Gothic building, with a tower and six bells; the living is a rectory, in the gift of the Earl of Grosvenor, and incumbency of the Rev. James Lyon. The RIBCHESTER, ALSTON, LONGRIDGE AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

RIBCHESTER, anciently written Ribeleastre, is a village, township and small parish, partly in the hundred of Blackburn and partly in that of Amonderness, situated about five miles N. N. W. of Blackburn. This village, now but of little note, derives the small share of importance it enjoys to the consequence attached to it in the time of the Romans, when it ranked amongst the first cities of Britain. The remains of Roman antiquity, in various forms, which have been discovered, and even to the present time occasionally present themselves, give ample confirmation to its having been a dwelling place of the Romans of no mean description. The manor is now possessed by Thomas Weld, Esq. of Lullworth Castle, who holds, by his steward, Robert Trappes, Esq. solicitor, a court leet and baron, twice a year. The parish church is dedicated to St. Wilfrid, and the living is a rectory and vicarage, in the gift of the bishop of Chester, and incumbency of the Rev. Jas. Quartley. Here is also a parochial chapel, and one for the catholics; the present minister of the former is the Rev. John Cottingham, and the Rev. James Wagstaff of the latter. At STYDDE, or Stidd, is a very ancient chapel, in the patronage of the vicar of Ribchester, who is also incumbent, and performs service there twice a year, beneath the ivy festoons, that wind their way through the unglazed windows, and clothe the walls of this interesting piece of antiquity. Some business is done in Ribchester in the cotton trade, but to the present time the manufactures of the place have not been extensive. Slate and stone quarries are in the vicinity of the village, and the streams of the rivers Ribble, Holder, and Calder wind through the parish, refreshing with their waters the vallies, and adding, by their presence, variety to the scenery, which around here is of a very pleasing description. The population of the whole parish of Ribchester, in 1821, consisted of 4,198 persons, of which number 1,760 were of the township.

ALSTON is a joint township with HOTHERSALL, in the hundred of Amonderness, six miles from Preston, containing about 1000 inhabitants.

LONGRIDGE is a populous village, situated in Longridge-fell, partly in the township of Alston with Hotherersall and partly in the township of Dilworth. A festival or guild is held here on St. Lawrence's day, and there are four fairs held annually, viz. March 16, April 16, the Monday preceding Holy Thursday, and the 5th November, for cattle, pedlery, &c.

To BLACKBURN, George Barton and Wm. Bury, every Monday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday.

ROCHDALE,

SPOTLAND, LITTLEBOROUGH, WUERDLE & WARDLE, WARDLEWORTH, MILNROW
AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

ROCHDALE, a market town and parish, in the hundred of Salford, in the deanery of Manchester, and in the archdeaconry of Chester, is 197 miles from London, 11 miles N. N. E. of Manchester, 7 N. N. W. of Oldham, and the like distance E. N. E. of Bury. It is situated in a valley or dale, on the river Roche, from which it derives its name, and under the range of hills called BLACKSTONE EDGE, prominences, forming part of what has been denominated the 'Back-bone of England;' and from which is produced coal, slate, and free-stone in great abundance. Several beautiful vallies, stretching in various directions, possess fine streams of water, of much use in the different manufactories; and these local advantages are much improved by the canal which connects the town with the navigable river Calder on one side, and the Bridgewater canal at Manchester on the other; by which it enjoys a communication with the ports of Liverpool and Hull and the whole line of inland navigation. The staple trade of the place is in the manufacture of various woollen fabrics, as baizes, flannels, coatings, and broad cloths; calicoes & strong cotton goods are also made here: the spinning of cotton, within a few years, has arrived at a high degree of importance; and the making of hats form also an important branch of business. The manufacturers here are of a very respectable rank; many of the establishments exceedingly extensive, and it may be truly added, that the town of Rochdale has attained that degree of consequence, as to place it on an equal footing with the most favoured towns in the great manufacturing counties of York and Lancaster. The municipal government of the town is with the magistrates of the county residing in and near to it. James Dearden, Esq. is lord of the manor, and holds, by his deputy steward, a court every three weeks, for the recovery of debts under 40s. The parish church, dedicated to St. Chad, stands upon a remarkable eminence, which is ascended from the lower part of the town by a flight of 122 steps, with several resting places before you arrive at the top, upon the attaining which, a fine view opens upon the sight, stretching along the thickly populated vale of Roach, bounded by the ridge of hills before named. The living of this church is a vicarage, in the gift of the archbishop of Canterbury, and the present incumbent is the Rev. W. R. Hay. St. James', in Yorkshire-street, and St. Mary's, in Cheetham-st. are the other places of worship under the establishment, and there are two others in progress of erection. The various denominations of dissenters from the church, and the Roman catholics and quakers have also chapels for their use. The public schools, charitable institutions, and societies for the promoting religion are numerous, reflecting great credit upon the inhabitants; who, amidst the busy scenes of commerce, have not forgotten the great benefits that active charity is capable of bestowing upon the poor and ignorant. The free grammar school is the most ancient scholastic establishment here, and was founded by archbishop Parker, in the 7th of Elizabeth; the number of pupils is generally 45; Mrs. Hardman's school educates 40 boys and 20 girls; and the national and Sunday schools instruct upwards of 3,460 children of both sexes. Here are bible and missionary societies, a ladies' charity, several benefit societies, and a savings' bank. The places of amusement are a play-house, two assembly rooms, and two billiard rooms. Several gentlemen's seats are in and near the town, amongst which may be named as attractive, 'Foxholes,' the seat of John Entwisle, Esq. magistrate. The country around here, although not remarkably productive, cannot escape notice by the traveller, for its picturesque beauty; and it is appropriately termed 'Alpine scenery in miniature.' Two fairs are held in the year, viz. on the 14th of May and 7th of November, besides a fair for cattle, held the first Monday in each month. The weekly markets are Monday and Saturday; the former is a great corn market, and is attended by numbers of the principal growers & factors in the surrounding counties; the sales of wool and manufactured goods are also made here on this day to a considerable amount. Saturday is the market for shambles meat, vegetables, &c. which is exceedingly well supplied. Rochdale having no township bearing its own name, the town is composed of a part of three townships, namely, Castleton, Spotland, and Wardleworth, which contained together, in 1801, 17,789 inhabitants; in 1811, 22,036; and in 1821, a population of 27,798 persons. The whole parish of Rochdale contained, by the last census, 47,109 inhabitants.

SPOTLAND is a township, and from its great extent is formed into three divisions, viz. 'Spotland nearer side,' 'Spotland further side,' and 'Whitworth and Brandwood.' Spotland takes its name from the Spodden, upon the banks of which rivulet it stands, and is in the hundred of Salford and parish of Rochdale, forming a part of the latter town. The manufactories in this township are of a most extensive nature: all the varieties of fabrics that ingenuity can produce, from the invaluable sources of the cotton pod and the fleece, are here brought to perfection. The population of this township, in 1821, consisted of 13,453 persons.

LITTLEBOROUGH, a village and chapelry, in the township of Blatchinworth and Calderbrook, three miles and a half N. E. of Rochdale; was a small Roman station, and the Roman road from Manchester to York skirts the village. It is pleasantly situated at the foot of Blackstone Edge, which, branching to the north and south, forms almost a continuous chain of mountains from Inverness, in Scotland, to the bay of Cardigan, in Wales, a distance of five hundred miles.

WUERDALE AND WARDLE, a township, half a mile N. E. of Rochdale, contained, in 1821, a population of 5,629 persons.

WARDLEWORTH, a township, in which stands the principal part of the town of Rochdale, contained, in 1821, 6,451 inhabitants.

MILNROW is a village and chapelry, in the township of Butterworth, two miles east of Rochdale, and possesses claim to notice by all natives of Lancashire, as being the place where Mr. John Collier, alias Tim Bobbin (by which latter name he wished to be called) lived 57 years, as school-master, and where he died on the 14th July, 1786, at the advanced age of 77 years, and was buried in the parish church yard of Rochdale. He was a poet, musician, and painter; but the production which has principally been the means of handing his name down to posterity, is his work written in the vulgar tongue of Lancashire, a "Dialogue between Tummus O'Williams O'Margit O'Roaph's, and Meary O'Dick's O'Tummy O'Peggy's." The eccentricities of Mr. Collier were harmless and pleasant; nor in the hour of death could he suppress giving birth to a humorous conceit, contained in the following epitaph upon himself and his "crooked rib," as he was wont to call his wife:—

'Here lies John, and with him Mary,
Cheek by jowl, and never vary;
No wonder they so well agree,
John wants no punch, and Moll no tea.'

The township of BUTTERWORTH contained, in 1821, 5,554 inhabitants.

POST OFFICE, the Walk, ROCHDALE, Jane Lees, Post Mistress.—Letters from LONDON, LIVERPOOL and MANCHESTER arrive twenty minutes before ten in the forenoon and half-past nine in the evening, and are despatched twenty minutes before ten in the forenoon and ten minutes before ten at night. Letters arrive by foot post from WHITWORTH, BACUP and NEWCHURCH every afternoon at two, and are despatched every morning at six.

ST. HELENS,
SUTTON, ECCLESTON AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

ST. HELENS, although only denominated a village, has, within these twenty years, so much increased in population, and improved in its general appearance, that it may now be ranked with many of the thriving towns of Lancashire. It is in the hundred of West Derby, and in the parish of Prescot, situate 196 miles from London, 12 E.N.E. of Liverpool, 10 N.W. of Warrington, the like distance S.W. of Wigan, and 4 E.N.E. of Prescot. The manufacture of crown, plate and flint glass is a branch of trade of great consequence here, and the 'Ravenhead Plate Glass Co.' the works of Messrs. West & Co. and others, are upon a very extensive scale. The plates of glass cast here are of great dimensions, some being as much as 140 by 72 inches; concave and convex mirrors are made as large as 36 inches in diameter, and the glass is as brilliant and perfect, in every respect, as the French or Venetian plates. Coal is obtained here in vast quantities, and the mining operations give employment to a great number of hands. Sir John Gerard, Bart. is lord of the manor of Windle (to which township St. Helens belongs) and holds a court leet, in the month of November. The place of worship under the establishment is St. Mary's chapel, the living of which is a perpetual curacy, vested in trustees, and the present incumbent is the Rev. Thos. Pigot. Here are besides two catholic chapels, and one each for the methodists, calvinists and quakers; an endowed free school, a catholic, charity and several Sunday-schools. A market is held here, by custom, every Saturday, and two fairs are held annually, viz. on the Monday and Tuesday after Easter-week, and the Friday and Saturday after the 8th of September. The population of the township of Windle, in 1821, consisted of 4,820 persons, but it is estimated that the number, at this period (1828) exceeds 6,000.

SUTTON is a township, in the parish of Prescot, extending to within a mile eastward of that town, and its northern extremity joining to St. Helens. In this township, as in St. Helens, the manufactories for crown and flint glass are of great importance; and there is also a considerable establishment for the manufacture of earthenware. In 1821 Sutton contained 2,329 inhabitants.

ECCLESTON township is situated like to Sutton, being bounded by Prescot and St. Helens, and contains some excellent stonequarries, coal mines, a considerable manufactory for earthenware, and a population of about 2,000 inhabitants.

SOUTHPORT AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

SOUTHPORT is a hamlet and chapelry, in the parish of North Meols, 9 miles from Ormskirk, 22 from Preston and Liverpool, and 41 from Manchester: it is situated at the mouth of the Ribble, on the coast of the Irish sea, and twenty-five years ago consisted only of a few straggling cottages, half buried in the sand hills that surrounded them; but now, owing to its proximity to several of the most considerable towns in the county, and its reputed salubrity, has risen to the rank of a fashionable bathing place, and boasts of three commodious hotels, and numerous private establishments, in which its visitors can partake of the enjoyments of the place, upon a scale adapted to their inclination or convenience: here are handsomely furnished cottages, in which the parties may be their own purveyors, and respectable boarding houses, where that trouble will be undertaken by the proprietors, and that too upon moderate terms. An episcopal chapel, called 'Christ's church,' was erected in 1820, of which the Rev. Wm. Docker is the minister: the patronage was vested in Mr. Hesketh, in consequence of his munificence in its endowment, and his engagement to improve still further the living. The Sunday-school connected with this church contains nearly three hundred scholars. A calvinistic independent chapel was built in 1823, and one for the methodists in 1824. In addition to a dispensary there is a very appropriate institution of benevolence, called 'the Stranger's Charity,' for the relief of the sick poor, to whose recovery sea air or bathing may be conducive. Coaches run every day during the season to Liverpool and Manchester, and three times a week to Bolton, Chorley, Warrington and St. Helens; and numerous carriages depart daily for Scarisbrick Bridge, to convey those passengers who arrive by canal from Manchester and Liverpool. There is also a boat leaves Southport every day, when the tide and weather permit, for Lytham and Blackpool.

The parish of NORTH MEOLS, in 1821, contained 3,177 inhabitants; and in 1824, when the census was taken by the resident clergyman, 3,920, about one half of that number being resident in SOUTHPORT.

STRETFORD,

CHORLTON, FLIXTON, URMSTON AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

STRETFORD is a chapelry, in the parish of Manchester, about four miles from that town, and contains an ancient chapel, dependent upon the Collegiate church of Manchester. This place has long been, and is still noted for the supply it yields of fine pork; and during the season as many as 700 fat pigs are frequently killed in the week, chiefly for the Manchester market. The population, in 1821, was about 2,200.

CHORLTON-WITH-HARDY is a chapelry, in the parish of Manchester, four miles s.s.w. of that town, and contained, in 1821, 624 inhabitants.

FLIXTON is a village, township and parish, in the hundred of Salford, in the archdeaconry of Chester, and deanery of Manchester, seven miles and a half from the last named town. St. Michael's church here is a small plain edifice, the living of which is a perpetual curacy, in the patronage of the prebendary of Lichfield and Coventry, and in the incumbency of the Rev. Wm. A. Cave. In 1821 about 1,600 persons formed the population of this township.

URMSTON is a village and township, in the parish of Flixton, five miles south-west of Manchester, and is said to have been the birth-place of John Collier, usually called Tim Bobbin, of whom more particular mention is made in the account of Milnrow, with Rochdale. This township contained, by the last census, 645 inhabitants.

TODMORDEN AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

THIS small but thriving market-town is partly in the parish of Rochdale and hundred of Salford, and partly in the parish of Halifax, Yorkshire, pleasantly situated in 'the vale of Todmorden,' about 9 miles N.E. of Rochdale, 12 W.S.W. of Halifax, and 20 N.N.E. from Manchester. The Calder glides through the valley, while the Rochdale canal skirts the southern extremity of the town, affording by their waters that great and necessary convenience to a manufacturing town, an uninterrupted and cheap conveyance by vessels. The present church was rebuilt upon the site of the original and ancient one, which it is supposed was erected as early as the reformation. Recently, a new parsonage house and sacristy have been added, and another place of burial; the site of these additions having been liberally bestowed by Mr. Samuel Greenwood, of this township; and the improvements, aided by the commissioners for building churches. In the chancel are monuments to the Radcliffes and the Crossleys, the two principal and most ancient families in the township. Since the reign of Henry VIII. to the present time the living has been in the patronage of the vicar of Rochdale; and the present incumbent is the Rev. Joseph Cowell. The other places of worship in this town and its immediate neighbourhood are, a friends' meeting house, two methodist chapels, two for the baptists, one for the independents and one for the unitarians. To each of these places of worship, except the quakers, are attached Sunday-schools, the church Sunday-school alone educating two hundred children of both sexes. The free school, adjoining to the church-yard, was endowed in 1713, by the Rev. Richard Clegg, a native of this township, himself contributing £100. and collecting £50. more from others; the interest to repair the school-house and the remainder to the master, who is elected by the majority of the freeholders of the township. The manufacturing establishments in this township are numerous, and many of them upon an extensive scale, having steam engines of great power, employed in the spinning, and manufacturing of cotton into calicoes, fustians, satteens, velveteens, &c. Market-day is on Thursday, and a fair, or rather cattle market, is held the first Thursday in every month; two annual fairs for cattle and general traffic also take place on the Thursday before Easter, and the other on Michaelmas-day. The township of TODMORDEN & WALSDEN, in 1821, contained nearly 5,000 inhabitants, having increased its population within twenty years about 2,500.

ULVERSTONE AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

ULVERSTONE, a sea-port, or more properly, a creek of the port of Lancaster, and a market town and parish, in the hundred of Lonsdale (north of the sands) in the deanery of Furness and Cartmel, is 261 miles from London, 64 from Carlisle, 22 N. W. of Lancaster, 14 S. S. W. of Hawkshead, 7 W. of Cartmel, and 5 N. E. of Dalton. It is situated upon the Leven, and is an ancient town, probably of Saxon origin, for when the conquest by the Saxons was completed, and the country divided by the chiefs, each gave his name to the space of land assigned him; hence are derived the names of Ulverstone, from Ulpha's town, Dalton, &c. This district was originally inhabited by the descendants of those Celtic colonies, who, on their arrival from the continent, settled in the southern parts of this island, and who afterwards extended their bounds to the north. After the departure of the Romans and the invasion of the Saxons, the Britons in Furness lived securely, relying upon the natural inaccessibility of their country; but at length shared the fate of the rest of the kingdom. Egfrid, king of the Northumbrians, gave St. Cuthbert the land called Cartmel, and all the Britons on it; and all Furness was divided into a number of small lordships, which were called after the name of their respective proprietors; some descendants of whom are still preserved and in possession of these very estates. The town consists principally of four spacious streets, the houses forming which are chiefly well built of stone and whitewashed, which gives them a clean and pleasing appearance, which is also improved by a clear rivulet of excellent water, which flows through a part of the town. The parish church of St. Mary is situated in a field a short distance from the town, upon an elevation which commands a most charming prospect over the country, the bay of Morecambe, Lancaster, &c. The living is a perpetual curacy, in the gift of Thomas Richmond Gale Braddyll, Esq. the lay rector, and the present incumbent is the Rev. John Sunderland. A new church is also about to be erected by the parliamentary commissioners. The other places of worship are, an independent, methodist, Roman catholic chapels, and the quaker's meeting-house, 1 mile S. W. built under the direction of the celebrated George Fox, and the first erected for that community in the kingdom. The public institutions are two good libraries, one clerical, the other general; an assembly room, a small theatre and a savings' bank. Here is a public school, with some charities attached; and a bequest of £12. per annum, by John Park, Esq. towards the support of as many poor men, with a suit of clothes every third year for each. Ulverstone has been long noted for its manufactures of check, canvas and hats, and from the great increase in trade is at present in a flourishing state. The principal exports are blue slate, got in the neighbourhood, of which immense quantities are sent coast-wise, and iron ore, obtained at Lindale. Great quantities of potatoes are raised in the neighbourhood, and the land seems peculiarly adapted to the cultivation of this valuable root. The canal, which is about a mile and a half in length, with proper basons and wharfs, opens an immediate communication with the Irish sea, and is a great convenience to the trade and the town. The principal seats in this neighbourhood are, Conishead Priory, belonging to T. R. G. Braddyll, Esq. the situation of which is most delightful; described by Mr. West, as 'the Paradise of Furness, and Mount Edgecombe in miniature:'—the edifice lately erected is on the site of the Priory of Conishead, at the foot of a fine eminence, the ground falling gently from it on all sides; the slopes are planted with shrubs and trees in such a manner as to improve the elevation, and the waving woods that fly from it on each side, give it an airy and noble appearance. The ancient building was pulled down about six years since, being beyond the reach of partial repair—Bardrea Hall is a very ancient building, formerly belonging to the Bardreas—the Rectory, Aldizgham, the residence of the Rev. J. Stonard—Penny-bridge, Jas. Penny Machell, Esq. and Holker Hall, the seat of Lord G. H. Cavendish. The weekly market is on Thursday, and the chartered fairs are the Tuesday before Easter Sunday, the 29th April, Holy Thursday, 7th October, and the first Thursday after the 23rd October, for cattle, horses, hiring servants and pederlery. The population of the whole parish of Ulverstone, in 1821, consisted of 7,102 persons, of which 4,315 were of the township.

POST OFFICE, Market-place, ULVERSTONE, Robert Towns, Post Master.—Letters arrive by Mail every morning at half-past six, and are despatched every afternoon at three. Letters by horse post arrive from BROUGHTON and BOOTH every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday at two in the afternoon, and are despatched every Monday, Wednesday and Friday at seven in the morning.

WARRINGTON,

LATCHFORD, THELWALL, & WILDERSPOOL (Cheshire) & NEIGHBOURHOODS.

WARRINGTON, an ancient market-town and parish, in the hundred of West Derby, in the deanery of Warrington, and in the archdeaconry of Chester, is seated on the river Mersey, over which is a wooden bridge, leading into the county of Cheshire: it is situated 10 miles E.S.E. of Prescott, 12 s. of Wigan, 18 from Liverpool and Manchester, and 182 from London. The etymology of its name is involved in some obscurity, conflicting opinions giving it both Roman and Saxon origin; that the latter people had a fort here is recorded, and hence it is asserted its name arises, Wæring, implying a fortification, and tun, a town. Previous to this, however, it was a Roman station, as is evidenced by the discovery, at various times, of some relics appertaining to that nation. The ancient family of the Butlers, or Boteler, flourished here so early as 1158, and it is to a branch of it that the inhabitants of Warrington are indebted for its being a market town; William de Boteler having obtained the original charter, in the reign of Edward I. The Butlers were also patrons of the priory of St. Augustine, founded in the thirteenth century, not a vestige of which now remains, the ruins of one of its ancient gateways having been cleared away about fifty years ago. Warrington was frequently the scene of the civil contests in the disturbed times of Charles I.; its inhabitants embracing the royal cause were oftentimes defeated, and suffered severely by the parliamentary troops. Sir George Booth, a great supporter of the measures of Cromwell, becoming dissatisfied, took part against the parliament, and his services procured him, at the restoration, the title of Baron Delamere, of Dunham Massey. The second lord supported the cause of the Prince of Orange, at the revolution in 1688, and was created Earl of Warrington, which title became extinct until 1736, when Mary, heir of the second earl, married the Earl of Stamford. The Warrington title was revived in 1796, and is inherited by his descendant, George Harry Grey, Earl of Stamford and Warrington.

The parish church of Warrington is ancient, and supposed to have been erected prior to the conquest, when it was the church of the hundred, and anciently dedicated to St. Elfin. Its original patronymic name, however, ceased with the alterations and necessary repairs, which took place at a long subsequent period; but the site on which St. Helen now stands is the same that supported St. Elfin. Some very old monuments adorn this church, particularly one with the figures of Sir Thomas Boteler and his lady, and others to the Masseys and Paten families. The living is a rectory, in the gift of Lord Lilford and in the incumbency of the Rev. R. A. Rawstone, whose curate is the Rev. Thomas Lowes. The other places of worship are, Trinity chapel of ease, of which the Rev. Robert Fallowfield is curate; and meeting houses for methodists, baptists, unitarians, independents, catholics, Lady Huntingdon's followers, and the society of friends. The number of children educated at the several Sunday-schools approach near to 3,000. Besides these valuable places of instruction many others are founded here of equal importance to the rising generation; 'Boteler's free school of Warrington,' founded in 1526, and richly endowed, affording, by a late decree of the court of chancery, a handsome salary to the masters and ushers, and that not less than thirty boys should receive the benefits of a grammatical education; George Tierney, Esq. M.P. is one amongst many talented individuals, who can dwell with satisfaction upon the merits of this establishment. The blue coat school, in Winwick-street, established about 1677, stands another monument to the pious and liberal people of this town, being supported by benefactions; about thirty boys and girls are clothed and educated by this charity, exclusive of one hundred and twenty boys and thirty girls, who receive instruction, but are not clothed. In the same street is also a female charity school, established in 1814, where 150 girls are taught to read and sew; and in 1826 an infants' school was opened. The press of Warrington has had the honour to give to the world several productions of high merit, amongst others, the work 'on prisons,' by the great philanthropist, John Howard, and Mrs. Barbauld's beautiful poem of 'Corsica.' Roscoe's poem of 'Mount Pleasant' issued from the press of Mr. Eyres, as did the works of Dr. Ferriar, Mr. Gibson and others. Several noted and talented men have been inhabitants of Warrington; M'Gowan, a baker, the author of the 'Shavers,' and 'the Dialogues of Devils,' satires, lived in Bridge-street; and Litherland, the inventor of the lever watch, was born here; John Blackburn, Esq. the celebrated botanist and great researcher in natural history, had his residence at Orford-hall, in this township. This gentleman was the second person who succeeded in rearing the pine-apple, and who cultivated the cotton tree with a certain portion of success in this country. He died in 1796, at the advanced age of 96 years. It is said that the first stage coach established in this county started from this town; and, although there is no newspaper published here at this period, yet the first that issued from the county of Lancashire was published in Warrington. The principal institutions that reflect honour and consequence upon this town, exclusive of the various establishments for instruction, are auxiliary Bible societies; missionary associations; a society for promoting christian knowledge; one for the relief of the widows and orphans of clergymen, in the archdeaconry of Chester; a ladies' charity, for affording relief to necessitous women in child-birth, a florist and horticultural society, a flourishing savings' bank, a mechanics' institution & public subscription library. The principal public buildings are, a town-hall, or sessions' house, market-hall, two cloth halls, a theatre, assembly rooms, and a temporary prison, called 'the Bridewell.' Here is also an incorporated gas company, having extensive premises in Mersey-street, from which the principal streets are well lighted. The navigable advantages possessed by this town are of great consequence when considered in a relative point of view to its extensive manufactures. The communication between Manchester and Liverpool, by means of the Mersey and Irwell rivers, is unremitting, and at the period of spring tides the former river rises at the bridge ten feet, and it has been known as high as fifteen feet, when vessels from seventy to one hundred tons burthen can float up to this point. The fishery, in the Mersey, in early times, was very valuable, and as late as 1763 it was worth upwards of £400. per annum; the smelts and salmon were very numerous, of extraordinary size and peculiar fine flavour; but the produce of the waters here, has of late years been inconsiderable. The government of this town, like that of Manchester, is in the constables, who, with other local and parochial officers, are elected in October, at the court leet of the lord of the manor, John Blackburn, Esq.; and petty sessions are held on the first and third Wednesday in each month. The manufactures of Warrington are as various as they are extensive, although at one period chiefly confined to the fabricating coarse linens, checks, huckabacks, &c. Still preserving the making of these articles, others of finer texture have taken the lead, such as muslins, calicoes, velveteens, &c. while the spinning of cotton employs a great number of hands, and a vast steam power. Here are also tanneries, glass works, pin making, and tools for the mechanic; in the latter branch of trade may be named files, of a superior and highly prized temper. The soil in this neighbourhood, generally taken, is deep and productive, supplying early green vegetables, potatoes, &c. to Manchester and other large towns surrounding this. About three miles hence is 'Hill cliff,' in Cheshire, remarkable for the extensive views obtained from that eminence; no less than eight counties can be embraced in the range of sight therefrom. One mile from Warrington is Bewsey-hall, the seat of Lord Lilford, and about the like distance is Orford-hall, the seat of the Hon. Mrs. Hornby. The chartered market is on Wednesday, when much business is done in grain, butcher's meat, vegetables, &c. An inferior market is also held on Saturday. There is also a fair, or more properly a cattle market, every alternate Wednesday. The chartered fairs are two in the year; the first commencing on the 18th July; the other on the 30th of November; they each continue ten days, when considerable transactions take place in the sale and purchase of woollen cloths, horses, horned cattle, sheep, pigs and pedlery. The parish of Warrington contains the chapelries of BURTONWOOD and HOLLINFARE, and the townships of POULTON-WITH-FEARNHEAD, WARRINGTON and WOOLSTON-WITH MARTINSCROFT. The whole parish contained, in 1821, nearly 17,000 persons, 13,570 of which number were in Warrington township, being an increase in its population within twenty years of upwards of 3,000 persons.

LATCHFORD (Cheshire) a chapelry, in the parish of Grappenhall, in the hundred of Bucklow, is one mile and a half S.E. of Warrington, and contained, in 1821, 1,252 inhabitants.

THELWALL (Cheshire) anciently - a considerable town, though now but an obscure village, is in the parish of Runcorn, and in the same hundred as Latchford, three miles and a half E.S.E. of Warrington, containing about 400 inhabitants.

WILDERSPOOL (Cheshire) in the same hundred as Latchford, is one mile and a half south-south-east of Warrington.

WHALLEY, GREAT HARWOOD & NEIGHBOURHOODS.

WHALLEY is a village and township, in an extensive and exceedingly populous parish of the same name, in the hundred and deanery of Blackburn, and in the archdeaconry of Chester; the village being situated about four miles south of Clithero, and is chiefly celebrated for its cistercian abbey, the ruins of which are amongst the most interesting remains of the country. The parish church, a very ancient foundation, dedicated to All Saints, is a vicarage, in the presentation of the archbishop of Canterbury, and incumbency of the Rev. Richard Noble. Here is one methodist chapel, a free grammar school, founded by Queen Elizabeth, and a national school, built by subscription in 1819. The manufactures carried on in this village are not extensive, and the trade attached to it is chiefly of a local nature. The parish of Whalley contains one borough and forty-eight townships,

including thirteen chapelries, four of which are market towns. In 1801 it contained a population of 49,175 persons, and in 1821, 84,934, of which number only 1,058 were inhabitants of the township.

GREAT HARWOOD, a chapelry, in the parish of Blackburn, four miles and a half north-east of that town, is a very ancient manor, given in the 12th century to Richard de Felton, and afterwards devolved in marriage to the Heskeths, the Leighs, and the Nowells.
The chapel of ease here was founded in the 14th century; the present minister is the Rev. Robert Dobson.
The manufacture of cotton has made its appearance here, at present, however, it is but circumscribed in its operation. The population of the chapelry, in 1821, consisted of 2104 persons.

POST OFFICE, WHALLEY, Matthew Wilkinson, Post Master.—Letters, by a horse post from

WIGAN,

HAIGH, HINDLEY, INCE, ORRELL, PEMBERTON, UPHOLLAND, STANDISH AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

WIGAN, a market town, borough and parish, in the hundred of West Derby, in the deanery of Warrington, and archdeaconry of Chester, is pleasantly situated near the source of the river Douglas, and is 199 miles from London, 18 w. n. w. of Manchester, 12 north of Warrington, and 9 south of Chorley. The right of the borough to send members to parliament is prescriptive, and the first return was made as early as the 23rd of Edward I.; the right of election, by custom, is in the free burgesses, the number is only about 130, the corporation having a power to admit non-resident and honorary burgesses to vote, without limitation, which power has been some times greatly abused, and tended to increase the expense of the contests, some of which have been very costly to the contending candidates. The present members are James Alexander Hodson, Esq. of Holland Grove, near this town, and Colonel James Lindsay, of Fifehire. The municipal authorities are a mayor, one justice, and two bailiffs, all elected annually by the resident burgesses. Wigan enjoys some valuable privileges, derived from no fewer than nine royal charters, amongst these are, the trying all civil actions, the causes of which have arisen in the town, and for the trial of all felonies, not capital, committed within the borough. A court of quarter session of the peace for the borough is held four times a year. The rector of the parish is lord of the manor for the time being, at present held by the Honbl. and Rev. George Bridgeman. The parish church, dedicated to All Saints, is a fine and ancient stately building, the living of which is a rectory, in the patronage of the Earl of Bradford, uncle to the present rector. The other church is St. George's, the incumbent of which is the Rev. Benjamin Powell. The places of dissenting worship are, two chapels for the Roman Catholics and independents, and a methodist, presbyterian, and baptist chapels, all these religious establishments have Sunday schools attached, which afford instruction to nearly 2500 children. Here are also a free, and blue coat schools, a school of industry, clothing and bible societies, a dispensary, a savings' bank, and mechanics' institute. The corporation have a town hall, erected in 1720, by the then members for the borough. The commercial hall, appropriated to the use of the clothiers, on the days of the fair, is a commodious structure of brick, built in 1816. The town is well supplied with water, by a company established in 1761, and well illuminated by gas, under a company chartered in 1823. The prosperity of Wigan has been materially advanced by its inland navigation: the Douglas is navigable from the town to the Ribble, at the point where it empties itself into the sea. The Leeds and Liverpool canal passes through the town, forming a communication with Liverpool on the one hand, and to the German ocean on the other. The Lancaster canal opens an intercourse with Kendal, in Westmoreland, and other parts. To a neighbourhood supported by manufactures, and abounding with mines of coal, for which there is always a demand proportionate to its quality, which is peculiarly excellent, and includes the beautiful cannel-coal, the advantages by these branches of transmission are of high importance. The principal fabrics manufactured here are home made linens, checks, calicos, fustians and other cotton goods; a considerable quantity of cotton yarn is spun in the neighbourhood, besides which there are iron and brass foundries, pewter works, and upon the Douglas are several manufactories for spades, and some corn mills; the power of the steam engines employed in the various works in the town and neighbourhood is equal to that of 600 horses. There are several springs or wells in the vicinity, which exhale a sulphuric gas, that bursts into a flame upon the application of a lighted candle, and continues to burn for several hours. Wigan Spa, or New Harrogate, is a strong sulphurous water, discovered some years ago, in boring for coals in a field near Scroles-bridge. It is said to greatly resemble the water of Harrogate, in Yorkshire, only that it does not contain so much saline matter. It has a considerable quantity of very fine sulphur; and has been frequently recommended in a variety of complaints with good effect. There is now a very elegant building erected for the use of those who resort to this spring, with conveniences for drinking the water, and for using it either as a hot or cold bath. There are many seats and residences in the vicinity of Wigan, occupied by noble, opulent and respectable families; some of these are in beautiful and attractive situations. The land around Wigan in general is well cultivated and fertile; towards the north and south west it gently undulates, and is agreeably diversified with hill and dale; towards the south it is more flat, while in the neighbourhood are many pleasing and delightful walks. The weekly markets are Monday and Friday, the latter being the principal; the fairs are on holy Thursday, the 27th of June, and 28th of October. The parish of Wigan contains one borough and twelve townships, including three chapelries. In 1801 the population consisted of 25,552 persons, in 1811, 31,481, and in 1821, 38,318, of which last number 17,716 were by that census resident in the borough; but it is estimated that the population since then has increased to 20,000 persons, being nearly double the number that it contained in 1801.

HAIGH is a township two miles north of Wigan, in that parish, and is one of the most interesting townships therein. Great quantities of cannel coal (mentioned above) is found here, and at Haigh-hall, the beautiful seat of the Earl of Balcarres & Baron Wigan, a summer house is made of it, said to have stood more than a hundred years, and in which ladies may seat themselves without danger to the purity of their most delicate vestures. Various toys are made from cannel, and when formed into boxes, plates, &c. it is susceptible of a polish as fine as black marble. This township contained, by the last census, 1,300 inhabitants.

HINDLEY is a chapelry in the parish of Wigan, from which town it is distant three miles, in which is a rare phenomenon, called by the inhabitants the 'Burning Well,' which attracts many visitors. This well is similar to the one at Petoa Mala, near Fierenzota, in Italy, with this difference, that the flame of the Italian spring is perpetual, except in heavy rains, and consists of sulphuric gas, while the inflammable principle of the one at Hindley is the decomposition of water acting upon ores and sulphate of iron. The number of inhabitants in this chapelry, in 1821, was 3,757.

LUCE is a township in the parish of Wigan, adjoining to that town upon the east. The manor of Luce anciently belonged to a family of that name, and came into the possession of the Gerards as early as 1259. The present owner of the manor house is Capt. John Walmsley, of Bath, whose father purchased it from a descendant of the Gerards. In 1821 the township of Luce contained nearly 1,400 inhabitants.

ORRELL, a township three miles west of Wigan, is famed for its mines of excellent coal, and has a peculiar interest attached to it, has having at 'Orrell Mount' an establishment of French Benedictine nuns, under Madame Louise de Levis Mirepoix, late of Montargis, in France, who, being driven from their native country by the horrors of the revolution, landed at Brighton on the 18th of October, 1792, and have ever since found an asylum in this country, first at Heath, in Yorkshire, and since 1821 at this place. By their unremitting and successful attention to the education of the youth of the catholic persuasion, and their exemplary deportment, this society has obtained the patronage of many distinguished individuals, and the kindly feelings of all who know the establishment. Orrell township contained, in 1821, 2,106 inhabitants.

PEMBERTON is a township and village in the parish of Wigan, two miles w.s.w. of that town, in which are several extensive coal mines, and Hawkley-hall, the residence of the Rev. W. Molineux, a very ancient building. The number of inhabitants in the township, in 1821, was nearly 4,000.

STANDISH is a township, parish and village, in the hundred and deanery of Leyland, and in the archdeaconry of Chester, three miles N.N.W. of Wigan. The parish Church of St. Wilfred is rather a handsome structure, of the Tuscan order, erected about 1584, by the Rev. Richard Moodie, a converted Franciscan monk, and the first protestant rector of this church. The rectory is now in the patronage of Chas. Standish, Esq. The free grammar school here was founded at the beginning of the 17th century, its endowment being about £90. per annum. Fairs are held on the 29th of June and the 22nd of November, for horses, horned cattle and toys. This parish contains ten townships, including a chapelry, and, in 1821, a population of 7,616 persons; of which number upwards of 2,000 were in STANDISH-WITH-LANGTREE.

UPHOLLAND, an ancient chapelry, four miles and a half west of Wigan, is rendered memorable by the great and ill-fated family who derived their descent and name herefrom, as well as for its monastery, which was created in 1318, through the means of Sir Robert de Holland, Knight. In 1546 the priory was sold to John Holcroft, Esq.; and at a subsequent period it became the property of Thos. Owen, Esq. from whom it passed by his daughter's marriage with Holt Leigh, Esq. down to his descendant, the present proprietor, Sir Robt. Holt Leigh, Bart. But little now remains of the ancient abbey except the church, which is used as a chapel of ease, and is in the patronage of the rector of Wigan, and in the incumbency of the Rev. John Bird. An increase in the population of this chapelry has taken place of about 1,000 persons within the last twenty years, which is to be attributed to the progress of manufactures. By the last census the number of inhabitants was 3,042.

LEICESTERSHIRE

IS an inland county, situated nearly in the middle of England, bounded on the north by Nottinghamshire and Derbyshire; on the west by the latter county and Warwickshire; on the south by Northamptonshire; and on the east by the counties of Rutland and Lincoln: to the north the Trent and Soar form part of its boundary: the famous Roman road, called Watling Street, and the small river Ankor, or Ankre, being its limits on the Warwickshire side; and the rivers Avon and Weland separating it from Northamptonshire. The shape of the county is very irregular, and extends in length, from north to south, about thirty miles, and about 25 from east to west, being nearly 100 miles in circumference, & containing about 522,240 statute acres.

The SOIL of Leicestershire is various, but for the most part strong and stiff, composed of clay and marl, affording, particularly in the east and south-east parts, a great extent of rich grazing land. The proportion of pasture and meadow land throughout the whole county much exceeds that of arable; and the north-east district gives sustenance to great numbers of sheep, a principal article of wealth to the inhabitants: the sheep are of a very large size, and their fleeces are long, flakey, and beautifully soft, particularly adapted for the worsted manufactures.

The PRODUCE and MANUFACTURES of this county, though not so varied as those of some counties, are, nevertheless, of great importance, and, indeed, commensurate with its population and extent. The manufacture of hosiery and many articles produced from the fleece are very considerable, the chief seat of which is the county town. The sheep bred here are the largest mutton with which the London markets are supplied; it is also famous for horned cattle, and a fine peculiar breed of large dray horses. In the north-west of the county are valuable coal mines, which supply the country round to a great distance. Much cheese is made in the west side of the county, about Leicester forest, and in some other parts; the rich kind called Stilton being made in the villages round Melton Mowbray. This is much of a farming county, producing large crops of corn, grass, and excellent beans, in great abundance. The rivers supply the towns with many sorts of fish, particularly the best sort of salmon, which comes from the Trent into the Soar.

RIVERS and CANALS.—The principal rivers are the Soare, or Soar, anciently the Liere, which, rising in the south-west border, runs to Leicester; after which it receives the Wreke, from the north-east, and then turns to Mount Soar hill and Loughborough, watering in its course meadows of uncommon beauty and fertility, till it falls into the Trent, not far from Cavendish bridge: the western parts are watered by the two head branches of the river Ankre, which go from hence into Warwickshire. The CANALS are the Loughbro', the Leicester, the Union, the Ashby-de-la-Zouch, the Grantham, the Oakham, and the Melton navigation.

The whole county is within the ecclesiastical jurisdiction of the see of Lincoln, and in the province of Canterbury, under one archdeacon and six deaneries; is divided into the six hundreds of FRAMLAND, GUTHLAXTON, GARTREE, SPARKENHOE, and EAST and WEST GOSCOTE, which contain one county town, eleven market towns and two hundred parishes. Leicestershire returns four members to parliament, viz. two for the town of Leicester and two for the county, the present representatives for the county being Lord Robert Manners and George A. Legh Keck, Esq.

POPULATION.—According to the census of 1821, there were houses inhabited in the county, 34,775; uninhabited, 1,141; and houses building, 225. The number of families then resident in the county was 36,806; comprising 86,390 males, and 88,181 females; total, 174,571: and by a calculation made by order of government, which included persons in the army and navy, for which was added after the ratio of about one to thirty prior to the year 1811, and one to fifty for that year and the census of 1821, to the returns made from the several districts; the population of the county, in round numbers, in the year 1700, was 80,000—in 1750, 95,000—in 1801, 134,400—in 1811, 155,100—and in 1821, 178,100. The increased population in the fifty years, from the year 1700, was 15,000—from 1750 to 1801, the increase was 39,400—from 1801 to 1811, the increase was 20,700—and from 1811 to 1821, the increased number of persons was 23,000: the grand total increase in the population of the county, from the year 1700 to the census of 1821, being about 98,100 persons.

ASHBY-DE-LA-ZOUCH AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

ASHBY-DE-LA-ZOUCH, a market town and parish, in the hundred of West Goscote, 116 miles from London and 18 from Leicester, is pleasantly situated in a fertile vale, on the skirts of Derbyshire, and on the banks of the small river Gilwiskaw, over which is a handsome stone bridge. The town consists of one main street, both wide and handsome, and two other streets running parallel to it on each side, at right angles to which the cottages of the poor inhabitants are placed, access being obtained by an entrance into the High-street, by the side of every alternate house. Buildings are carrying on rapidly, and it bids fair to vie, in a few years, with any of the more fashionable watering places, for the beauty and salubrity of its situation. The original name of this town was simply Ashby, but it acquired the addition of de-la-Zouch (to distinguish it from other Ashbys) from the Zouches, who were formerly lords of this manor. The remains of the castle exist which was built by Sir William Hastings, in the reign of Edward IV., in which James I. was entertained during seventeen days, at an enormous expense, by the Earl of Huntingdon, and dismantled in 1648, by order of the House of Commons. In this castle the unfortunate and persecuted Mary Queen of Scots, who has given celebrity to so many castles and old mansions, by her melancholy imprisonments beneath their lofty turrets, was for some time confined, while in custody of the Earl of Huntingdon. Parts of the wall of the hall chapel and kitchen are still remaining, which display a grand and interesting mass of ruins. The parish church, dedicated to St. Helen, is built of stone, and is a handsome ancient edifice, the living of which is a vicarage, in the patronage of the Marquis of Hastings (who is lord of the manor) and in the incumbency of the Rev. William M'Douall. The other places of worship are, a chapel each for the independents, Wesleyan methodists and calvinists. Here is an endowed free school, founded in 1567, by Henry Earl of Huntingdon; a blue-coat school, founded by Isaac Dawson, in 1669; and a green-coat school, endowed by Alderman Newton, of Leicester. Within the distance of four miles from the town are several collieries: fire bricks are manufactured to a considerable extent; and the wolds abound with fine iron-stone. The source of the river Mease is in this parish, which runs at the bottom of the town; the Ashby canal to Coventry passes through the parish; and there are several springs, the Holywell, especially, is a remarkably fine and copious one, romantically situated. The land in the neighbourhood is fertile, both for grazing and corn. The market-day is on Saturday; and there are five fairs in the year, viz., Shrove-Monday, Easter-Tuesday, Whitsun-Tuesday, the last Monday in September, and November 10th, principally for horses and cattle, and the hiring servants. In 1821 the parish contained 3,937 inhabitants.

POST OFFICE, ASHBY-DE-LA-ZOUCH, George Hartwell, Post Master.—The LONDON and South Mails arrive at half-past nine in the morning, and are despatched at half-past four in the evening.—Letters for MANCHESTER, LIVERPOOL and the North, are forwarded by a horse post to BURTON at a quarter before ten in the morning, and arrive at four in the evening.

BILLESDON

IS a small market town and parish, in the hundred of Gartree, 93 miles from London, and nine from Leicester and Market Harborough. Whatever might have been the consequence of this town in the time of the Romans, it is certainly of very little importance in the present day as a place of trade; and the only object calculated to excite interest with the antiquarian, are the remains of a strong Roman camp, that incloses eighteen acres. A small market is held on Friday, and a fair on the 23d of April, principally for toys. Billesdon parish, with the chapelries of GOADBY and ROLLESTON, contained, in 1821, 751 inhabitants.

CASTLE DONINGTON AND KEGWORTH.

CASTLE DONINGTON, a small market-town, in a parish of the same name, in the hundred of West Goscote, is 119 miles from London, 9 from Ashby-de-la-Zouch, and about the like distance from Loughborough. The north extremity of the parish is bounded by the river Trent, upon which are a flour, paper, and flint grinding mills. The manufacture of lace net, stocking weaving and basket making are the principal trades carried on here, and a few miles to the north and south are coal mines. Lord Viscount Melbourne is lord of the manor, and holds a court leet, in the month of October, when a constable is chosen for the government of the town. The parish church is a vicarage, in the incumbency of the Rev. John Dalby, and in the patronage of the Marquis of Hastings, who has a beautiful seat, Donington park, about one mile from the town. The general appearance of the country round here is very fertile, and the views from the summit of the hill, upon the side of which the town stands, are very extensive and beautiful, heightened by the romantic appearance of the remains of the old castle to the north. The market day is on Saturday, and there are two fairs held in the year, viz., on the 18th March and on Michaelmas-day. The population of the parish, in 1821, consisted of 1,236 males and 1,354 females, total 2,590 inhabitants.

KEGWORTH, anciently written Cogeworde, a village, giving name to the parish in which it lies, is in the same hundred as Castle Donington, 115 miles from London and 6 north-west of Loughborough, situated on a beautiful eminence, near to the river Trent, over which is an elegant stone bridge, called 'Cavendish bridge,' built at the sole expense of the Duke of Devonshire. The parish church, dedicated to St. Andrew is a rectory, in the incumbency of the Rev. Dr. Parkinson, archdeacon of Leicester, whose curates are the Rev. Alexander Poole and the Rev. Joseph Bancroft Reade. The other places of worship in the parish are, All Saints' chapel, at Isley-Walton, under the establishment; and meeting houses for the general baptists and methodists. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture, and many of the females in frame-work knitting and lace figuring. The soil of this parish and its vicinity is exceedingly fruitful, either for corn or grass, and the general appearance of the country is as pleasant as can be imagined. The population of the parish of KEGWORTH, including the chapelry of ISLEY-WALTON, contained, in 1821, 1,672 inhabitants.

POST OFFICE, CASTLE DONINGTON, James Smith, Post Master.—Letters from LONDON arrive at eleven in the morning, and are despatched at four in the evening, and from MANCHESTER and the North at seven in the evening, and are despatched at eight in the morning.——KEGWORTH, Samuel Barrow, Post Master.—Letters arrive by the LONDON Mail at half-past eight in the morning, and are despatched at half-past five in the evening.

HALLATON

Is a small parish, and market-town, in the hundred of Gartree, 91 miles from London, 15 from Leicester and 7 from Market Harborough, pleasantly situated in a fertile valley. The parish church is a large and handsome structure, with a tower, surmounted by a spire; it is dedicated to St. Michael, and the interior is enriched with some very ancient and excellent carved work. Here is a charity school, established by a lady in 1707. In 1767 the market, which had been long discontinued, was revived, and is now held on Thursday, much to the benefit of the town, the appearance of which, since that time, has much improved. The fairs are on Holy Thursday, and on the Thursday three weeks after, for cattle, cloths, hardware, &c. The number of inhabitants in the parish, in 1821, was 644.

HINCKLEY,

AND THE VILLAGES OF EARL SHILTON, HIGHAM-ON-THE-HILL, STOKE GOLDING AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

HINCKLEY is a market town and parish, in the hundred of Sparkenhoe, 99 miles from London, 21 from Ashby-de-la-Zouch, 13 from Leicester, and 11 from Lutterworth. It is said to be situated on the highest ground in England, and upwards of fifty churches can be seen from the extreme eminence. The parish church is an ancient edifice, being ascribed to the 13th century. It has a very strong spire steeple, a tuneable ring of six bells, and a chime. The roof of this church is of beautiful oak, and the beams are supported by large pendant cherubims (like those in Westminster Hall) and ornamented with a number of grotesque faces. The tower is modern, built with part of the stones once forming the castle of John o' Gaunt. The living is a vicarage in the incumbency of the Rev. Matthew Browne, and the Rev. Joseph Bray is the present curate. Besides the parish church there are meeting houses for presbyterians, independents, quakers, baptists and methodists, and a chapel for Roman catholics. The town is divided into the borough and the bond without the liberties, the limits of what is now called the borough have been extended by the successive addition of four streets. The civil government is vested in a mayor, constables and head-boroughs. Thomas Sansome, Esq. is lord of the manor, and holds a court leet and baron annually. A large quantity of hose are manufactured here; and the number of frames in the town and adjacent villages have been computed at upwards of 1,200. The market day is Monday: the fairs are Easter Monday, the Monday before Whit-Monday, and on Whit-Monday, for horses, cows, sheep, &c.; August the 26th and the Monday after October the 28th, for cheese, &c. The entire parish contained, in 1821, 8,706 inhabitants, of which number 4,216 were in the township of Hinckley-bond.

EARL SHILTON is a chapelry in the parish of Kirkby Mallory, and in the hundred of Sparkenhoe, about 4 miles N.N.E. of Hinckley. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture, and the number, in 1821, was about 1,800.

HIGHAM, or Higham-on-the-Hill, is a small parish and village, in the same hundred as Hinckley, about 3 miles W.N.W. from that town. In 1607 a great many silver coins of Henry III. were found in turning up a stone of large size; several Roman coins, and other relics of that nation, were also found about the same period, in digging at this part of the ancient Watling-street. HIGHAM-ON-THE-HILL, with LINDLEY parish, in 1821, contained about 600 inhabitants.

STOKE GOLDING, a chapelry, in the parish of Hinckley, about 2½ miles from that town, contained, in 1821, about 1,000 inhabitants.

POST OFFICE, Market-place, HINCKLEY, William Tomlinson, Post Master.—The Mail from LONDON arrives every morning at a quarter past seven, and is despatched at half-past six in the evening.—The COVENTRY, BIRMINGHAM, BRISTOL, MANCHESTER, and LIVERPOOL Mails arrive every morning at twelve, and are despatched at a quarter before one.—The LEICESTER, NOTTINGHAM, MELTON, and STAMFORD Mails arrive every morning at one, and are despatched at a quarter before twelve.—The HOLYHEAD, CHESTER, LICHFIELD, and ATHERSTONE Mail arrives every evening at half-past six, and departs at half-past seven in the morning.

LEICESTER,

AND THE VILLAGES OF AYLESTONE, BELGRAVE, BIRSTALL, BLABY, GREAT GLEN, HUMBERSTONE, OADBY, SCRAPTOFT, THURMASTON, THURNBY, WHETSTONE AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

LEICESTER, a borough, the county town, and the largest and most populous in Leicestershire, is 98 miles from London, situated in the hundred of West Gos-cote, upon the river Soar, and said to have been erected by King Lear, or Leir, 850 years before the christian era. Though much credit cannot be given to the accounts of such a distant period, nevertheless, Lear has the reputation of having built the great temple of Janus, which formerly stood near the banks of the river Leir, now Soar. That Leicester was built long before the time of the Romans no writer has disputed, and the variation of its name proves that it has passed through a long succession of time. Its first name being Caer Leon or Lerion, afterwards Lege Cestria, Leogora, Legeocester, in the Saxon annals Legerceaster, and with some other little variations, now Leicester. There is no doubt but it was a considerable station in the time of the Romans, from the number of antiquities of that nation which have been found in it; and during the Saxon heptarchy it was also a place of consequence, being in the centre of the kingdom of Mercia. This town seems often to have been the seat of contention, and its castle often-times battered down and rebuilt, but scarcely anything remains of it now, but an artificial mound or earth-work of the keep. There was formerly an abbey which possessed numerous privileges, and was possessed of land in thirty-six parishes, in and about Leicester, and in most of the manors of this and other counties; but its buildings are nearly levelled with the earth which covers the ashes of its ancient inhabitants. This abbey, which was situated about three quarters of a mile from the town, afforded accommodation and lodgement to several of the kings of England, on their excursions to and from the north. It was here also that the great and ambitious Cardinal Wolsey died on the 29th of November, 1530, on his journey from York to London, having just before been stripped of his dignities by his royal master. He took to his bed immediately upon entering this hospitable asylum, and expired three days afterwards; and while surrounded by the listening monks he pronounced that memorable sentence, 'If I had served my God as faithfully as I have served my king he would not in my old age have thus forsaken me.' At the time of the Norman conquest there appears to have been six churches, which is the present number under the establishment: they are St. Martin's, St. Mary's, St. Margaret's, All-saints, St. Nicholas', and St. George's. The dissenting chapels are, seven for the baptists, two each for the independents, Wesleyans and primitive methodists; and one each for unitarians, Lady Huntington's followers, catholics & quakers. The public erections are the county gaol, erected in 1791; the town gaol, a commodious stone building; the new bridewell, the exchange, a commodious theatre, various hospitals, a lunatic asylum, a free grammar school, and several charity schools. The town is governed by a mayor, recorder, town clerk, bailiff, 24 aldermen, and 48 common council men. Courts of assize are held here twice in the year, and sessions quarterly; Lord Huntingtower is lord of the manor, and holds courts leet and baron occasionally. Leicester sends two members to parliament; the right of voting is with the freemen, whether resident or not, and also with 'the inhabitant householders of the ancient borough;' the number of voters is about 6,000, & the returning officers are the mayor and bailiff. The present representatives are Sir Charles Abney Hastings, Bart. of Willesley, in the county of Derby, and Robert Otway Cave, Esq. of Stanford, in this county. Besides the privilege of being represented in parliament, the freemen of the borough enjoy other valuable ones; amongst which is being free of toll in all the markets and fairs in England. The trade of this town is principally in the manufacture of all kinds of hosiery, but more particularly in the making of worsted stockings; no place in the world producing articles of this kind to anything like the extent that are fabricated here: & it is estimated that upwards of 20,000 persons receive comfort and employment from the works of this town, and that, at times, more than 18,000 dozens of hose, &c. per week are wrought within the town and the immediate neighbourhood. Great facilities are afforded to the manufacturer, by the canal from Market Harborough to Loughborough, which passes here; the margins of which exhibit all those signs of bustling activity which characterize large trading towns; while the river Soar, meandering around, contributes both to its ornament and salubrity. About forty years since, a beautiful public walk was made here by a spirited subscription, the ground for which was given by the corporation. It is almost a mile in length, extending in a south-east direction from the town; and at different stations along its line many pleasing views are obtained of the town, the

LOUGHBOROUGH,

QUORNDON, SHEEPSHEAD AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

LOUGHBOROUGH, a market town and parish, in the hundred of West Goscote, 109 miles from London, and eleven from Leicester, is a great thoroughfare, being situated on the road from the metropolis to the great trading town of Manchester. The manufactures of this town consist of cotton, worsted and merino hosiery; and bobbin net lace, an article of great beauty and durability, for which a patent was obtained, and until a few years ago the whole of the patentee's machinery was worked here; but great damage being done to it by the luddites, part was removed into Devonshire, since which time a great number of machines have been made, under licence of the patentee, which has much benefitted the town. There is a navigable canal, which communicates with the Union canal and the river Soar, the shares in which have risen to an astonishing value: from hence is a rail-way to Broadhurst-hill, on the borders of Charnwood forest; also a canal to the lime works at Barrow-hill, near Worthington. Here is a public library, and a dispensary; several charitable associations; and three free schools well endowed. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a large pile of building, erected by subscription, towards the end of the 16th century; the living is a rectory, in the patronage of Emanuel college, Cambridge, and in the incumbency of the Rev. William Holme, whose present curates are the Rev. Edmund Fletcher and the Rev. Joseph Place. The Wesleyan and primitive methodists, general and particular baptists, presbyterians, calvinists, and quakers, have each a place of worship. Thomas Denning, Esq. is lord of the manor, and holds a court leet and baron once in the year; and some of the county magistrates hold weekly meetings, for deciding petty causes arising in the town and neighbourhood. The country round here is agricultural, rather flat, but very fertile; and from the higher grounds very fine views are obtained, extending to the Charnwood forest hills; while the home scenery is very pleasing. The weekly market is on Thursday, and the fairs are the 14th February, 28th March, 25th April, Holy Thursday, 12th August, 30th September, and 13th November, for sheep, cattle, cheese, &c. The whole parish of Loughborough contained, in 1821, 7,494 inhabitants, of which number 7,365 were resident in the township.

QUORNDON, a village and chapelry, in the parish of Barrow-upon-Soar, is about 2 miles from Loughborough, containing one church under the establishment, and a chapel each for the Wesleyan and primitive methodists, and for the general baptists. The living of the church is a perpetual curacy, in the incumbency of the Rev. J. W. R. Boyer. The prosperity and increased population of the village are derived from the successful introduction of stocking weaving and the manufacture of warp and bobbin twist lace, which employs a great portion of the inhabitants; the number of which, in 1821 (including WOODHOUSE chapelry) amounted to 2570 persons.

SHEEPSHEAD is a populous village, in a parish of the same name, and in the same hundred as Loughborough, about 4 miles N.W. of that town. The church, of which Charles March Phillipps, Esq. of Garendon park, is the patron, and lord of the manor, is a vicarage. A methodist chapel and a general and particular baptists' chapels, are the other places of worship in the parish. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in stocking weaving, and the extensive concerns of Mess. Churchill & Co. and Messrs. Jaques and Sons, afford employment to a great number of the industrious poor. The entire parish, in 1821, contained 3,464 inhabitants.

POST OFFICE, High-street, LOUGHBOROUGH, John Fowler, Post Master.—The London mail arrives at eight in the morning and is dispatched at six in the evening. The North Mails arrive at six in the evening and are dispatched at eight in the morning.

LUTTERWORTH,

AND THE VILLAGES OF BITTESWELL, DUNTON, GREAT CLAYBROOKE, ULLESTHORPE AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

LUTTERWORTH is a market town and parish without any dependent township, in the hundred of Guthlaxton, eighty-nine miles from London, twelve from Leicester and eleven from Hinckley, situated upon the banks of the small river Swift, which, soon after passing the town, joins the Avon. Of late years the town has very much improved in appearance, the new-built houses being neatly built of brick and slate-roofed. The church is a large, handsome building, with a nave, two aisles, a tower and a chancel, which last is separated from the nave by a beautiful screen. The chancel is supposed to have been built by the Lord Ferrers, of Groby, as his arms are cut on the outside, above the great window. The tower is remarkably handsome, with four beautiful turrets; in the beginning of the 18th century, however, the roof was beat in by the fall of the spire, which was nearly fifty feet higher than the present turrets. About the year 1740 the whole was repaired, a pavement of chequered stone laid, and all the inside made new, except the pulpit, which is of thick oak planks, of an hexagonal shape, and has a seam of carved work in the joints. This church is remarkable as having contained the remains of the reformer Wickliffe, buried here in 1387, and in 1427 his bones were dug up, burnt, and their ashes thrown into the river Swift. His dining table, pulpit and gown are still preserved with high veneration. The living is a rectory in the gift of the crown,

POST OFFICE, High-street, LUTTERWORTH, Wm. Mash, Post Master.—Letters arrive from LONDON at a quarter past six every morning, and at a quarter before eight every evening, and are despatched in ten minutes after.

MARKET BOSWORTH AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

MARKET BOSWORTH, anciently a market town, and giving name to a parish in the hundred of Spark-enhoe, is 106 miles from London, and eleven from Leicester; pleasantly situated on an eminence. The church is spacious, though low, and has a very beautiful spire; it had formerly five chapels annexed to it.
In it is a fine old monument to the memory of the Dixie family. Here is a free school, founded in the year 1586, by Sir Wolstan Dixie, who was lord mayor of London; and a chapel each for the independents and baptists. Contiguous to the town is Bosworth hall, the seat of Mrs. Pochin, sister to the late Sir Wolstan Dixie, Bart. who succeeded to this estate in the year 1766. About three miles south-east of the town is a large open plain, anciently called Redmore, but afterwards Bosworth field (now enclosed), where was fought the famous battle between Richard III. and the Earl of Richmond, afterwards Henry VII. in which the former lost his life. The issue of this sanguinary engagement tended to unite the two families of York and Lancaster, whose contentions had kept the nation in a continued succession of wars, hostilities, and personal animosities, from the beginning of the reign of Henry VI. to the termination of that of Richard.

The town is very much improved within these few years, and the manufacture of hosiery goods is carried on here, though not to a great extent. Its annual fairs are held on May 8, for horses, cows and sheep, and July 10, for horses and cows. The population of the whole parish, in 1821, consisted of 2,667 persons, of which number about 1,000 were resident in the town.

POST OFFICE, William Maides, Post Master.—The Mail is despatched to HINCKLEY every afternoon at four, and arrives every morning at ten.

MARKET HARBOROUGH, GREAT BOWDEN
AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

MARKET HARBOROUGH, a small, but well-built market town, in the parish of Great Bowden,
and in the hundred of Gartree, is eighty-three miles from London and fifteen from Leicester, situated near the banks of the river Welland, at the southern extremity of the county, and upon the site of an encampment of the Romans. This town being dependent, in ecclesiastical affairs, on the parish of Great Bowden, a small village about one mile to the east,
its chief religious structure is only a chapel of ease;

this is, however, a large, handsome and nearly uniform building, consisting of a nave, two aisles, a chancel, with two tiers of windows, two porches, and a tower, with a handsome spire. The living is a perpetual curacy, in the gift of Christ Church College, Oxford, and in the incumbency of the Rev. W. Scarborough. Besides the above chapel, there are meeting houses for presbyterians, quakers and methodists.
In the principal street is a large town hall; and near the chapel is a free grammar school, founded by Mr.

Leicestershire. MARKET HARBOROUGH, &c. Pigot & Co.'s

Smith. This town is a great thoroughfare, the road from London to Leicester, Nottingham, Derby, Manchester, &c. running through it; the entrance to it from London is over a handsome stone bridge. The principal trade carried on here is an extensive manufacture of carpets and worsteds, by Messrs. Clarke and Sons, which employs a great number of poor families in the town and neighbourhood. The land in the neighbourhood is peculiarly fine for grazing. The Earl of Harborough is lord of the manor, and holds courts leet and baron at uncertain periods. The market day is Thursday; and the principal fairs, are April 29th and 30th, and October 19th and eight following days; there are also other smaller fairs, or rather cattle markets in the course of the year. Market Harborough contained, in 1821, 1,873 inhabitants.

GREAT BOWDEN is a parish, containing a small village, situated one mile from Market Harborough. The population of the whole parish, in 1821, was 2,834.

POST OFFICE, High-street, MARKET HARBOROUGH, William Hill, Post Master.—The Mail for LONDON is despatched every evening at half-past nine, and arrives every morning at five.—Letters for MANCHESTER are despatched every morning at five, and arrive every evening at half-past seven.

MELTON MOWBRAY & NEIGHBOURHOOD.

MELTON MOWBRAY is a neat market-town, in the hundred of Framland, 106 miles from London and 15 from Leicester: it was formerly called Medeleton; is situated on the road from London to Leeds, in a rich grazing country, and much celebrated for its being the residence of several noblemen and gentlemen of distinction, during the hunting season. The packs of hounds kept by the Duke of Rutland, at Belvoir castle; by Lord Lonsdale, at Cottesmore; and the subscription pack, at Quorndon, now hunted by Lord Southampton, afford the lovers of field sports an opportunity of hunting six days in the week: many houses in the town are furnished solely for these visitors, and some of the principal trades-people let lodgings to them during the winter months: there is also stabling in the town for five hundred horses. A court leet and baron is held every three weeks, for the recovery of debts under forty shillings, at which Jas. Thos. Bishop, Esq. presides. Lord Viscount Melbourne is lord of the manor, and Samuel Caldecot, Esq. is his steward. The church is a fine Gothic edifice, dedicated to St. Mary; the ground plan is in the form of a cross, and the whole building is crowned with embattled parapets, with a tower rising from the centre. The living is a vicarage, in the patronage of — Godfrey, Esq. and in the incumbency of the Rev. Thos. Godfrey; the Rev. Wm. John Shirkcliffe is curate for Melton Mowbray, and the Rev. — Brereton, curate of Freeby & Welby hamlets, in this parish. The river Eye runs close to the town, and is navigable to Leicester and Loughborough; it also communicates with the Oakham canal. There

MOUNT SORREL,

BARROW-UPON-SOAR AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

MOUNT SORREL, a small market-town and chapelry, in the parish of Barrow-upon-Soar, 105 miles from London, 13 from Melton Mowbray, and seven from Leicester. Its name is derived from its situation, being on a steep craggy mount, near the banks of the river Soar. On the western side of the town is the termination of a range of high hills, extending into Derbyshire; the highest point, nearly overhanging the town, is denominated 'Castle-hill,' where once stood a fortress, that is mentioned as early as the reign of King Stephen, and was of particular note in the disputes between the barons and the crown in the time of King John and Henry III. The hill of Mount Sorrel is a rock of reddish granite, with pieces of which the streets are paved; in many places they stand out bare, and are of such a hard nature, after being exposed to the air, that scarcely any tool can be found to work them; they are generally termed Charley forest stones. In this town formerly stood a curious cross, which was taken down in 1793, and removed into the grounds of Sir John Danvers, who erected a small market-house (in imitation of a pavilion) in its stead. Here are chapels of the establishment, which belong to, and are subordinate to the church at Barrow; also meeting-houses, belong-

WIGSTON,

OR Wigston Magna, a parish and village, about four miles s.s.e. of Leicester, in the hundred of Guthlaxton, is distinguished by having two churches with steeples, &c. one of which has been long disused, and is falling into decay. Here is a free school, and an hospital for three poor men and as many women, who are comfortably supported by a weekly allowance. The lunatic asylum, which has been established here upwards of twenty years, is ably conducted by Mr. Burgess, surgeon: the building is most judiciously situated, in a retired and salubrious spot, affording to those patients who are capable of appreciating the recreations of country life, all the comforts, domestic and otherwise, that can be applied to their unhappy disorder. The parish of Wigston contained, in 1821, 2,089 inhabitants.

LINCOLNSHIRE

IS a maritime county, bounded on the north by the river Humber, which separates it from Yorkshire; on the east by the German ocean; on the south by Cambridgeshire and Northamptonshire; and on the west by the counties of Rutland, Leicester, Nottingham and York: its form is an irregular oblong; in length, from north to south, it is 77 miles; in breadth, about 48; and in circumference 160; containing, according to the best estimation, 1,893,100 acres.

The ANCIENT HISTORY of this county, subsequent to its being inhabited by its original possessors, a class of Britons named Coritani, is recognised as being comprised in the Roman province of Flavia Cesariensis: in the Heptarchy it belonged to the kingdom of Mercia, which was then divided into two provinces, north and south; and as the river Trent was the line of separation, this county constituted a considerable part of South Mercia. From the remains of ancient fortifications, it is judged that Lincolnshire must have been considered of great importance by the Romans, who established military stations, which were connected by roads intersecting the whole county: the principal of these ways, or roads were, Ermin-street, the Foss and the Salt-way. The principal stations and encampments were, Aquis, the present Alkborough; Causennia, Ancaster; Brigæ, Brant Broughton; Durobrivis, Caistor; Crocoland, Collingham; Banovallum, Horn-castle; In Medio, Kirton-in-Lindsay; Liudum, Lincoln; Sidnacester, Ludford; Tiovul fingacestre, Tattershall; Vianona, Wainfleet; Verometum, Willoughby; and Ad-Abum, Winteringham. During the time of the Romans, Lincolnshire was considerably improved, several large drains and canals were cut, and a stupendous embankment was raised in the marshes, to guard against the encroachments of the sea; but after the Romans withdrew from Britain this extensive embankment was neglected, and the country fell again into its former fenny and marshy state. Lincolnshire, in early times, suffered severely from the incursions of the Danes; and in the year 870, these people landed at Humberstone and spoiled the country, when they destroyed the famous monastery of Bardney, and massacred in the church all the monks, without mercy. In the general spoliation and slaughter that attended the marches of these merciless invaders, Croyland monastery fell a sacrifice, and with it its religious inmates, none escaping the sword of the barbarians but one single youth. The skill of Alfred the Great caused the Anglo-Saxon monarchs to lay aside their respective differences and confederate for mutual defence; and, by this policy, the Danes were subdued, and the sovereignty of Mercia fell into the hands of Alfred. Some places, however, were still retained by the Danes, amongst which were Lincoln and Stamford, until the year 941, when they were expelled by Edmund the Elder. William the Norman, when he subjugated England, divided the manors of Lincolnshire in various proportions, amongst his favourites; and, although from the lapse of time it would be difficult to ascertain their respective situations, it is probable that many of the principal families in the county are derived lineally or collaterally from the persons to whom these manors were originally granted.

SOIL and CLIMATE.—Every description of soil, from the sharpest sand and lightest moor, to the strongest clay, in all the various mixtures and qualities, are found in this county; which combine the three natural features of the Cliffs, the Wolds, and the Fens. The cliffs slope towards the west into a range of rich meadow and pasture land, along which flows the Trent; those which decline to the east, being a tract varied in its quality and character. The wolds are a bold range of hills, extending from Barton-on-the-Humber to Spilsby, consisting principally of sandy and flint loams, and on the western side the lower stratum is a sandy rock. The fens, a prominent tract in this county, consist of lands, which at some distant period have been recovered from the inundations of the sea, by human industry. The drainage of these fens commenced as early as William I.; through various subsequent reigns the drainage works were carried on with spirit, till the 13th of Charles I. when an interruption took place from the opposition of the Gyrvi or fen-dwellers, a rude people, enemies to improvement in lands; and from that period, till the middle of the 18th century, but little was prosecuted in the way of these useful enclosures; when acts of parliament were obtained, and all the tracts of fen-land were successively drained. The CLIMATE and air of Lincolnshire, upon the highest part, in point of salubrity, is equal to any in the kingdom; in the western part, along the Trent, it is very healthy, but upon the sea-coast it is not to be so much commended.

The PRODUCE of this county consists principally of sheep, neat cattle, horses and corn. The sheep are large, clothed with long thick wool, peculiarly serviceable for the worsted and coarse woollen manufactures, of which great quantities are annually sent into Yorkshire and other counties. The neat cattle are of a large sort; but the dairy is here little regarded, the production of fat cattle being the principal object of attention. The horses bred in Lincolnshire have long been held in high estimation, both for saddle and harness, while in the southern part excellent draught horses are produced. Much of the high land in the county is devoted to tillage, producing every variety of grain; and a great part of the marsh land is applied to grazing. Large quantities of flax and hemp, rape and turnip seed are produced in the Isle of Axholme; and the manufacture of canvas and sail cloths, in some towns of the county, have taken root with a considerable degree of success. In the undrained state of the fens, geese were considered the fenman's treasure, and large flocks of these birds were kept and attended, during the time of incubation, with the most assiduous care: some individuals have been known to possess a thousand of these birds, which, on an average, would produce seven-fold in a season. They were frequently plucked, as the feathers and quills formed valuable articles of commerce. Decoys for taking wild fowl were at one time very numerous in this county, and several remain, which still furnish the London and other markets with a tolerable supply of wild fowl. The wild geese are at this period very numerous in the marshes, from which they frequently make excursions, in large flocks, to a considerable distance, and not unfrequently return with an accession to their numbers. The MINERALS of this county are of little importance to it in the scale of trade; some variegated spotted marble, sulphurate of iron, and a sub-phosphate of iron being all the varieties which have been yet met with.

RIVERS and CANALS.—The principal rivers, which either rise in this county, pass through it, or are connected with it, are, the TRENT, which rises in Staffordshire; the ANCHOLME, a small river rising in the north cliffs; the WELLAND, having its source near Sibertoff, in Northamptonshire; the WITHAM, which first appears 10 miles N. of Stamford; & the BANE, rising at the village of Ludford. The canals are the GRANTHAM, the STAINFORTH and KEADLEY, and the CASTOR and LOUTH.

Lincolnshire, included in the midland circuit, is in the province of Canterbury and diocese of Lincoln. The city of Lincoln, with four adjacent villages, form a distinct county, under the denomination of 'the city and county of the city.' The remainder is divided into three parts, viz.—LINDSAY, KESTEVEN and HOLLAND; and these are sub-divided into thirty-three hundreds, wapentakes, sokes, &c. which contain 630 parishes, one city, and 34 market towns. Lincolnshire returns twelve members to parliament; two for the county, two for the city, two for each of the boroughs of Boston, Grantham, Grimsby and Stamford. The present representatives of the county are, Sir William A. Ingleby, of Kettlethorpe, and Charles Chaplin, Esq. of Blankney.

POPULATION.—According to the census of 1821, there were houses inhabited in the county, 53,813; uninhabited, 979; and houses building, 302. The number of families then resident in the county was, 58,760; comprising 141,570 males, and 141,488 females; total, 283,058; and by a calculation made by order of government, which included persons in the army and navy, for which was added after the ratio of about one to thirty prior to the year 1811, and one to fifty for that year and the census of 1821, to the returns made from the several districts; the population of the county, in round numbers, in the year 1700, was 180,000—in 1750, 160,200—in 1801, 215,500—in 1811, 245,900—and in 1821, 288,800. From the year 1700 to 1750, there was a decrease in the population of the county of 19,800 persons—from 1750 to 1801, the increase was 55,300—from 1801 to 1811, the increase was 30,400—and from 1811 to 1821, the increase was 42,900: the grand total increase in the population of the county, from the year 1700 to the census of 1821 being about 108,800.

ALFORD AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

ALFORD, a parish and neat market-town, in the hundred of Calceworth, is seated on a small brook, consisting principally of one street, a quarter of a mile in length; 6 miles from the sea, 7 north-east of Spilsby, 10 south-east of Louth, and 140 north of London. The church, an ancient structure, dedicated to St. Wilfred, endowed about the year 1209, is a vicarage, united with Rigsby; the Bishop of Lincoln is patron and rector, and the Rev. Edmund Dawson is the incumbent. In the church is an ancient monument to Sir Robert Christopher, Knight, and his wife Elizabeth. Here are chapels belonging to the independents and methodists, an endowed free grammar school, founded in 1565, by Francis Spanning, the funds of which, in 1811, amounted to £192. 15s. and a commodious national school, for boys and girls, erected in 1811, wherein one hundred and thirty children are educated. Sir Robert Christopher, Knight, by will, dated February 1st, 1668, gave £550. for building alms-houses at Alford, for six poor people, and for purchasing lands for their perpetual maintenance. The savings' bank was established in 1817; and is open every Friday evening. About two miles N.W. of the town are the ruins of Aby abbey, dedicated to St. Mary; and at Markby, two miles to the S.E. was an Augustine priory, founded in the fifth year of the reign of King John. One mile S.W. of Alford, upon the heath, near the village of Well, are three curious Celtic barrows, where, in 1725, two urns were found, containing six hundred Roman coins. At the village of Well, two miles from Alford, in a delightful situation, is the seat of Francis John Bateman Dashwood, Esq. The market is on Tuesday, and the fairs are Whit-Tuesday and November 8th, for cattle and sheep. In 1821 the parish of Alford contained 1,506 inhabitants.

POST OFFICE, Windmill Inn, ALFORD, John Nicholson, Post Master.—A Mail gig is despatched every morning at half-past eleven, to the New Inn, ULCEBY CROSS (where the Mails on the BOSTON and GRIMSBY road leave letters for ALFORD) and returns at three in the afternoon.

BARTON AND BARROW-UPON-HUMBER.

BARTON-UPON-HUMBER, a market-town and parish, in the hundred of Yarborough and division of Lindsay, is 167 miles north of London, 34 north of Lincoln and 6 south-west of Hull. It is a place of high antiquity, and was formerly surrounded by a rampart and foss, the remains of which are still visible, in what are called the castle dykes. Barton is pleasantly situated, on the southern bank of the Humber, upon a gentle declivity, at the foot of the northern extremity of a range of chalky hills, which cross the eastern part of the county; and consists of several streets, not closely built. At the time of the conquest, it is stated to have been a place of considerable importance, being a principal port on the river Humber; and, till the erection of Kingston-upon-Hull, by Edward I., carried on a considerable trade. It is, at the present day, a thriving town; a good trade existing in corn and flour, and several manufactories of starch, Paris whiting, sacks, ropes, cables, &c.; besides which, considerable quantities of bricks, tiles and potters'-ware are made here; and the tanneries are upon a large scale. The lordship is very extensive: the manorial rights are vested in the crown; and a court leet is held once a year, with a court baron, and court of pleas, as occasion may require. A court of requests is holden once a month; a court of petty sessions once within the same period, and the magistrates hold sessions once a fortnight. The mother church, dedicated to St. Peter, appears from the tower to have been built about the time of the Conqueror; but the body of the church was rebuilt after the introduction of the pointed arch. St. Mary's, considered a chapel of ease to that of St. Peter, is evidently a more modern building, and is very spacious; they are both situated at the east end of the town, and are fine stately objects. The living of St. Peter's is an impropriate rectory, in the gift of the Appleby family, and in the incumbency of the Rev. William Appleby. Here is also a chapel each for the Wesleyan and primitive methodists and calvinists. The charitable institutions are, a blue coat charity, for clothing twenty-four poor men and the like number of women; the free school, founded in 1722; and Sunday schools, which instruct about four hundred children. The poor of Barton are also benefited by several charitable bequests; and at Christmas, coals and clothing are distributed to the worthy necessitous. About three miles to the south-east of Barton are the magnificent ruins of Thornton college or abbey, founded in 1180 for black canons. The town derives great spirit and importance from being the place where the great northern road passes the Humber to Hull. The ferry is about seven miles over, and packet boats for passengers and carriages cross and re-cross the river every day. Agriculture in this neighbourhood is in great perfection, and from the elevated parts of the lordship the views are very extensive and pleasing. The weekly market is on Monday, and a market once a fortnight for fat and lean cattle. The annual fair is on Trinity Thursday and the following day, for horses, oxen, sheep and pedlery. The population of the two parishes, in 1821, was—Barton, St. Mary, 1,191; Barton, St. Peter, 1,305—total number of inhabitants, 2,496.

BARROW-UPON-HUMBER, a village and parish, rather more than two miles from Barton, in the same hundred as that town, is situated near to the salt marshes, and contains a church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, and a meeting house each for the Wesleyan and primitive methodists and baptists. The living is a vicarage, in the patronage of the crown, and in the incumbency of the Rev. H. Hesleden. Attempts are making to establish a communication with Hull by means of a steam packet to this place or Dent's Creek, which, if successful, will occasion coaches to run hence to Louth, and materially benefit, and enhance the importance of this village. The parish contained, in 1821, 1,307 inhabitants.

BOSTON,

A PARISH and well-built market-town, borough and seaport, in the hundred of Skirbeck and division of Holland, is 116 miles from London and 36 from Lincoln, situated on both sides of the river Witham, about five miles from its influx with the sea. According to some authorities it is asserted to derive its name from Botolph's town, and to have had its origin with Botolph, a Saxon; but others support an opinion of its having been a Roman settlement, from some ancient foundations of buildings, urns, and other specimens of antiquity that were discovered here in 1716. Prior to the reign of King John, Boston appears to have been a place of considerable importance; and when Edward III. was preparing to invade Brittany, it furnished a greater number of vessels than was supplied either by Portsmouth, Hull, Harwich or Lynn. In point of commercial importance, Boston is by far the first town in the county of Lincoln: formerly a very great trade was carried on here in the exportation of wool; that, however, was prohibited, and the present trade consists principally of corn, coal and timber. The enclosure of the fens has tended most materially to the increase of the commercial importance of Boston, by causing immense quantities of grain to be brought into its market; and the subsequent shipment of this grain to London and other places gives employment to an increased quantity of shipping. Of late years, too, there has been a growing trade to the Baltic: a very considerable trade also is carried on with the interior of the kingdom, by means of the Witham and the various navigable canals with which it communicates; and manufactures have gained some footing in the town, consisting of sackings, canvas, sail cloth and lace; besides which, there are iron and brass foundries, on a large scale. Boston parish church, a noble specimen of architecture, dedicated to St. Botolph, is of the description called the ornamental or middle Gothic: the nave is supported by seven arches on each side, with two clestory windows over each arch: the choir has five windows on each side, with a large one behind the altar: the windows of the aisles and of the upper story are respectively of two different patterns, varied alternately; those of the choir are also of different designs, and the tracery on the parapets of the aisles is counterchanged in the same manner as the windows, which circumstances show the building to have been erected about the middle of the 14th century. The parapet over the east end of the north aisle is very curious and elaborate, being pierced with tracery of nearly the same design as the arch buttresses of Henry VII.'s chapel at Westminster. The general view of the interior of the church is grand and striking, an effect rising from the ample size and proportion of every part, rather than from any peculiar elegance. Almost all the original decorations have given way to the ravages of time, or the ruthless progress of repair; and not the slightest fragment of painted glass is left. A tower is attached to the church, much the same as that of Louth, but much larger and nobler. The roof of the tower and the gutters round the lantern are formed of stone, very curiously contrived and put together, and the whole structure of the lantern is admirably light and beautiful. The masonry of this fine tower is worthy of the design, scarcely any crack or settlement being perceptible; the latter defect, indeed, was amply provided against by the immense foundation, the courses of which have been found to extend under the river. The architect has taken equal care that the tower should not depend for any support on the nave, for we find the buttresses contracted on that side, so as to make the elevations of the sides rather irregular. The lantern was intended, no doubt, to be lighted at night, for a sea mark or guide to mariners, as they entered the dangerous channels of Lynn and Boston Deep. This elegant structure is 282 feet in height, and may be seen forty miles round the country. The living of this church is a vicarage, in the presentation of the mayor and burgesses, and in the incumbency of the Rev. Bartholomew Goe. The chapel of ease, in High-street, was erected by subscription, and opened in 1822; it is a perpetual curacy, in the gift of the subscribers for fifteen years, and after that period in the corporation; the Rev. R. Conington is the incumbent, and the Rev. J. Raven is the present curate. The other places of worship are, chapels for the methodists, baptists, independents, calvinists, unitarians, Roman catholics and quakers. Among the charitable foundations of this town are, a free grammar school, founded in Queen Elizabeth's reign; a blue-coat school, established in 1713; Laughton's charity school, founded in 1707; one upon the Lancasterian plan, and another upon Dr. Bell's system. The dispensary is a valuable institution, extensive in its benefits, affording medicinal and surgical aid to the afflicted poor. The buildings erected for public purposes are, the Guildhall, in South-street; the borough gaol, at the south end of the town; the house of correction, in Skirbeck quarter; the police and town clerk's office, in the Market-place; the workhouse, in St. John's-row; and the coal gas works, near the Grandsluice. The places of amusement are, the theatre, in Red Lion-street; Vauxhall gardens (a place much resorted to during the summer) about a mile from the town; and the assembly rooms, on the east side of the Haven, adjoining the bridge. Boston has also a theatre of arts, open every Wednesday; and two subscription news' rooms, with libraries attached.

The town was first incorporated by Henry VIII, and Queen Elizabeth gave the corporation a court of admiralty over all the neighbouring sea-coasts: it consists of a mayor, recorder, twelve aldermen and eighteen common council, with a judge advocate, town clerk, &c. Boston has sent members to parliament since the 37th year of Henry VIII.: the present representatives are, John Gilbert Heathcote, Esq. and Neil Malcolm, Esq. The right of voting is vested in the sons of aldermen, the eldest sons of common councilmen and in the freemen of the town, viz. those who have served an apprenticeship to freemen of the borough; the mayor is the returning officer. Sessions are held here quarterly; and a court of requests every fortnight, at the Guildhall, for the recovery of debts under £5. Several improvements have of late years been made in this town, by taking down old buildings and erecting new ones; but the greatest is that of deepening the channel of the river, and enlarging the harbour; and the erection of an iron bridge, consisting of a single arch, eighty-six feet six inches in span, and in breadth thirty-nine feet. The expense of erecting this bridge, including the purchase money of buildings, &c. was nearly £22,000. the whole of which was defrayed by the corporation. In the centre of the Market-place an undertaking has commenced of boring for spring water; on the 8th of January, 1828, they had reached the depth of six hundred feet, but without accomplishing the object of the work. Boston is situated in the midst of an agricultural and flat country; the late enclosure of the surrounding fens having added much to its prosperity. The land is very fertile, applicable to pasturage and the produce of corn, the crops of which are usually abundant, and the cattle of the finest description. The weekly markets are Wednesdays and Saturdays; and the fairs are, May 4th and 5th, for cattle and sheep; August 5th, for fat cattle; November 18th and two following days, a horse mart; and December 11th, for horses and all kinds of cattle. The population of the town and borough of Boston, in 1821, consisted of 4,861 males and 5,512 females; making a total of 10,373 persons.

BOURNE AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

BOURNE is a parish, containing a hamlet of the same name, having a small weekly market, situate in the hundred of Aveland, 97 miles from London, 36 from Lincoln, 15 from Grantham and 7 from Market Deeping, lying in a flat, adjoining the fens; the town being about a mile and a quarter in length, from east to west, and about half a mile in breadth from north to south: contiguous to it is a spring, remarkable for the purity of its water, which turns several mills within a small distance of its head, and runs through the town of Spalding. The church, which is dedicated to St. Peter, is a handsome structure, of the early Norman style, having a lofty chancel, a nave and side aisles. Here are several chapels for dissenters, and two alms-houses, one for six poor men, and the other for the same number of poor women, each endowed with £30. per annum; and also a free-school. Besides these, there are many other gifts, donations and benefices, belonging to the poor of this town. In the centre of the market-place is a town-hall, under which the shambles are situated, and where the petty sessions for the parts of Kesteven are regularly held, at Michaelmas and Christmas. In the town is a medicinal spring, much frequented, the waters of which have a brackish taste, and a purgative quality, very similar in their effects, but of greater strength than those of Astrop, in Northamptonshire. The town is not noted for any particular manufacture, but there are some respectable wool-stapling and malting concerns; and the canal, which has been cut from hence to Boston, is of much benefit to the general trade of the place. This town was the birth-place of the ill-fated Doctor Dodd, who was born in the year 1729, and was executed in 1777. The market is held on Saturday; and the fairs are the 7th March, the 6th May, October 29th and November 30th. The population of the whole parish, in 1821, consisted of 2,242 persons, of which number 2,029 were then resident in the hamlet.

POST OFFICE, Edward Gough, Post Master.—Letters arrive at seven in the morning, and are despatched at twenty-five minutes past seven in the evening.

BRIGG,

OR Glumford Briggs or Glandford Bridge, a market town and chapelry, in the hundred of Yarborough and division of Lindsay, is 156 miles from London, 24 N. of Lincoln, and 16 s. w. of Hull. It is situated on the banks of the river Archolme, in the centre of the level of that name, the draining of which was accomplished some years since, at a considerable expence, and which is supported by a tax on the land, and tonnage on the navigation of the river, which is navigable from Bishop's Bridge, to Ferraby-sluice, where it opens into the Humber. Above and below the town the river divides into two branches, one of which runs through the town, the other a quarter of a mile westward of it, and has a small, but commodious bridge over each branch. It forms a part of the four adjoining parishes of Wrawby, Bigby, Broughton and Searby, but has no place of worship for the established church, except a small but neat chapel, erected at the expence of four gentlemen in 1699. The primitive and Wesleyan methodists, independents and quakers have each a meeting house in the town, and the Roman catholics have a chapel. The free grammar school here was founded and endowed by Sir John Nelson, Bart. for the instruction of boys born in the town of Brigg, in the classics, and for others, not natives, in reading, writing, and arithmetic, the number of scholars being limited to eighty. Robert Carey Elwes, Esq. is lord of the manor, and holds a court occasionally; there is also a court of requests: and the magistrates hold petty sessions once a fortnight. This town was originally a fishing hamlet, but has been for some centuries past a small market town. It is neatly built and paved, and has a good trade, which consists chiefly in corn, coal and timber; the principal manufacture in the town is that of skins, particularly rabbit, in which last there are more hands employed than in any other provincial town in the kingdom. The soil about the town is sandy, and the land of the several parishes with which it is connected is generally highly cultivated. The market is on Thursday; and the annual fair on the 5th of August, for horses and cattle, but it is generally more of a pleasure fair. The chapelry contained, according to the census of 1821, 1,674 inhabitants.

POST OFFICE, Wrawby-street, Matthew Cox, Post Master.—Letters arrive from LONDON, LINCOLN, SLEAFORD and SPITAL, at half-past one in the afternoon, and are despatched to those places at half-past twelve at noon.—From HULL and BARTON, at half-past twelve at noon, and are despatched at half-past one in the afternoon.—From GRIMSBY, LIMBER, CAISTOR and LOUTH, at half-past eleven in the morning, and are despatched at two in the afternoon.

BURTON-UPON-STATHER,

NORMANBY, WINTERTON AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

BURTON-UPON-STATHER, a parish, in the wapentake of Manley, and also extending into Corringham wapentake, containing a village, once ranking as a market-town, is 165 miles north of London and 10 north of Brigg, situated on the brow of a hill, at the foot of which flows the river Trent, where there is a wharf, or Staith, commonly called Stather, serving to distinguish this place from Burton, in Staffordshire, which is also situated on the Trent. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is a handsome structure, of the 13th century, consisting of a tower, nave and three aisles. The living is a vicarage, in the patronage of Sir Robert Sheffield, Bart. of Normanby hall, and in the incumbency of the Rev. Charles Sheffield. Alkborough hill, near this town, is remarkable for a kind of labyrinth upon its summit, called the Julian tower, supposed to be the remains of a Roman fortification. The market, which used to be held on Tuesday, is fallen into disuse; but there are two fairs in the year, viz. on the first Monday in May, and on the first Monday after St. Martin's day. The population of Burton Stather parish consisted, in 1821, of 762 inhabitants.

NORMANBY, a hamlet, in the parish of Burton

Stather, derives its chief claim to notice as containing the ancient seat of the Sheffields. The present representative of that family, Sir Robert Sheffield, Bart. has a beautiful newly erected mansion, in Normanby park, which is one of the greatest ornaments of the country for many miles round.

WINTERTON, a village and parish, eight miles w.s.w. of Barton, which is the nearest post town, is a place of great antiquity, seated two miles from the Humber and five from the Trent. In 1747 three curious tessellated pavements were discovered by Mr. W. Fowler, the celebrated antiquarian, who gave to the world a splendid collection of prints, the result of much labour and research. The parish church, dedicated to All Saints, is a spacious edifice, with a tower: the living is a vicarage, in the patronage of the king, and in the incumbency of the Rev. T. W. Northmore. A regular meeting of farmers, for the disposal of corn, &c. takes place on Wednesday, but there is no weekly market. A fair for cattle is held annually, on the 6th of July, and it is in contemplation to establish another in the autumn. The population of the parish, in 1821, was 1,015.

CAISTOR,

OR Castor, a small market-town, in a parish of the same name, is chiefly in the wapentake of Yarbrough, and a small part in the hundred of Walshcroft. The place is of great antiquity, and its present name is derived from the Castrum, which was built by Hengist, who, after defeating the Picts and Scots, obtained from Vortigern as much land here as he could encompass with the hide of an ox, which being cut into small strips or thongs, encircled a large plot of ground, on which he built a fortified mansion, called by the Saxons Thuang Castor. The town is situated 157 miles from London, 23 from Lincoln and 8 from Brigg, in a fertile part of the county, and noted for its excellent springs. The parish church, which is dedicated to St. Peter and St. Paul, is a fine old edifice of the early English and Saxon architecture; the living is a vicarage and prebendary, and the Rev. Isaac Wilson is the incumbent. Amongst the singular tenures of this country may be noticed the following ceremony, which takes place at the parish church every Palm Sunday. A proprietor of an estate in this neighbourhood sends an agent to the north porch, where he is enjoined to crack, what is here called a horse gad (a whip) three times, while the clergyman is reading the first lesson, he then proceeds into the church and waves the stock of the whip, to which is appended a purse, containing 2s. three times over the clergyman's head, and after remaining in the church till the service is concluded, he proceeds to the manor house, where the whip and purse are deposited. Here is a free grammar school, founded in 1630; a house of industry, and a savings' bank. The market-day is Saturday; and there are three fairs in the year, viz. the Friday before Palm Sunday, for sheep and cattle; the Saturday before Whitsuntide, and the Friday after Old Michaelmas, for cattle and pleasure. The population of the whole parish, in 1821, consisted of 1,388 inhabitants, of which number 135 were in the chapelry of HOLTEN-LE-MOOR.

POST OFFICE, Cornhill, George Capes, Post Master.—Letters arrive by horse post from BRIGG at five every evening, and are despatched at seven in the morning.

CORBY

IS a small and inconsiderable market-town, in a parish of the same name, 11½ miles S.E. of Grantham, in the hundred of Belisloe; a place of very little trade, and containing nothing worthy of notice, except a free-school, for the education of the sons of deceased clergymen. The market-day is so little used as scarcely to be distinguished from other days in the week. The living here is a vicarage, in the incumbency of the Rev. Thomas Willan. The parish contained, in 1821, 581 inhabitants.

CROWLAND.

A SMALL market town, seven miles from Spalding, in the hundred of Elloe, is surrounded by a swampy, flat and uninteresting country. The town consists of four streets, connected by means of a triangular bridge, probably one of the most curious relics of antiquity in the kingdom; at the foot of which stands the dilapidated, though finely executed statue of Alfred, or, as some affirm, of Ethelbald, king of Mercia, who founded a monastery at Crowland, in the year 716, the remains of which, partly Saxon and partly in the Gothic style, are highly interesting. The black friars being murdered and their monastery set on fire by the Danes, it was re-founded by king Edred in 948; it was also burnt in 1091, rebuilt some time after, and continued in uninterrupted splendour till the general dissolution by order of Henry VIII. One of the aisles is covered over and fitted up for the parish church; and over the west gate are some finely carved figures of ancient kings and monks. The market day is Thursday, and the fairs are June 28th, September 4th, and a trifling one between the 20th and 30th of May. The population of the parish of Crowland, according to the last census, was 1082 males and 1031 females, making a total of 2113.

EPWORTH, OWSTON AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

EPWORTH is a parish and market-town, in the wapentake of Manley and division of Lindsay, in the isle of Axholme, 30 miles N.N.W. of Lincoln and 12 miles north of Gainsborough. W. B. P. Johnson, Esq. is lord of the manor, and holds manorial courts twice a year, in a building erected for that purpose, in the Market-place. The parish church, dedicated to St. Andrew, the living of which is a rectory, is in the gift of the crown, and in the incumbency of the Rev. George Beckett. The other places of worship are, a chapel each for the baptists, the old and new connexion, and primitive methodists. The principal trade of the place is in dressing flax and hemp, large quantities being grown in the neighbourhood; and many of the inhabitants are employed in the manufacture of sacking and canvas. The weekly market is on Thursday, and there are two annual fairs, on the first Thursday after the 1st of May, and the Thursday after the 29th of September, for cattle, hemp and flax: the parish of Epworth contained, in 1821, 1,763 inhabitants.

Owston, a village and parish, in the west division of Manley wapentake, 5 miles N. of Gainsborough and 3 S.E. of Epworth, is situated on the western side of the Trent, and contains a church, dedicated to St. Martin, the living of which is in the gift of the crown, and incumbency of the Rev. W.B. Stonehouse. This parish contains the townships of WEST BUTTERWICK and KELFIELD, and, in 1821, 1,969 inhabitants formed the population of the whole.

FALKINGHAM AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

FALKINGHAM, or Folkingham, is a small market-town, in a parish of the same name, in the hundred of Aveland, 106 miles from London, 27 from Lincoln and 14 from Spalding, situated on the side of a hill, abounding in springs, in a healthy and fine sporting country. In the one hundred and thirty one manors in the county of Lincoln, Falkingham was included, and formed part of the immense possessions belonging to Gilbert de Gaunt, who accompanied King William from Normandy. It was afterwards granted to Henry de Bellamonte, or Beaumont (in the reign of Edward I.) who, it was supposed, erected the castle, which, on account of its being defended for Charles I. was destroyed by Cromwell. To the south-east of the town is a large encampment, with a foss and vallum; within the area (in a square form) is a keep of raised earth, defended by a foss, capable of being filled with water from an adjoining brook; at the north-east corner, on the outside, is a small fortified enclosure, no doubt intended to secure the water for the use of the garrison. At a small village called Walcot, about a mile to the north-west of the town, is a chalybeate spring, renowned for its medicinal virtues; and about two miles to the north-east was a Gilbertine priory, founded by Godwinus, a rich citizen of London, in the time of King John. The church is a well-built structure, in the pointed style, having at the west end a handsome lofty tower, crowned with eight elegant light crocketed pinnacles. The new county gaol is a handsome building; and the houses in general have a commanding view over the extensive adjacent fens. Falkingham enjoys but very little trade; and the market, which is held on Thursday, is of but trifling importance. The fairs are Ash-Wednesday and Palm-Monday, May 12th, Nov. 10th and 22nd, for horses, sheep and tradesmen's goods, June 19th, for horses and horned cattle; and July 3rd, for hemp, hardware, &c. The whole parish of Falkingham, by the census of 1821, contained but 759 inhabitants.

POST OFFICE, Thomas Wing, Post Master.—The Mails from LONDON and the South arrive at eight in the morning, and are despatched at half-past six in the evening.—The North Mails arrive at half-past six in the evening, and are despatched to the North on the arrival of the LONDON Mail.

GAINSBOROUGH AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

GAINSBOROUGH, or Gainsburgh, a market-town and parish, in the hundred of Corringham and division of Lindsay, 150 miles from London and 18 north-west of Lincoln, is pleasantly situated on the east bank of the river Trent, about 30 miles from its junction with the Humber: it consists principally of one long street, parallel with the river, which is navigable to this place for vessels of 150 tons burden.

By means of this stream, which unites with the Humber river, and the Readley and Chesterfield canals, it carries on a considerable trade in corn and other commodities, to and from the coast, and also participates with Hull in the trade to the Baltic; and so much has the trade increased of late years, that a custom-house has been established. There are several very respectable concerns in the glass and lead trade; those of Messrs. Furley & Co. Flower & Co. and Mr. George Barley, being very extensive; the former house having also large rope works. Ship building is a branch here of some consequence; the yards of Messrs. Furley & Co. and Mr. Henry Smith being the principal ones. In 1791 a fine stone bridge, with three elliptical arches, was raised over the river Trent, which is private property, and passengers and carriages of all sorts are subjected to toll for passing over. An old hall, commonly called the Palace, is a singular edifice. It is constructed principally of oak timber framing, and forms three sides of a quadrangle. This building was formerly surrounded by a moat, and had large gardens, fishponds, &c. attached to it. Tradition ascribes it to John o' Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster, but it appears of a later age. The parish church, dedicated to All Saints, was taken down, in 1736, and rebuilt in a modern and chaste style. The old tower a fine specimen of architecture, of the 14th century, was allowed to remain, and forms a singular contrast with the new erection. The living is a vicarage, in the gift of the crown, and the great tithes belong to R. Duckle, Esq. as lessee of the bishop of Lincoln. Besides the church, there are in the town six chapels and meeting houses, belonging to the methodists, baptists, independents, friends and presbyterians. Here is a grammar school, founded in 1671; and a general charity school, wherein two hundred children are educated. H. B. Hickman, Esq. is lord of the manor, and holds, by his steward, a court leet twice in the year, at which the constables and other officers appointed for the government of the town are chosen. The town-hall is a plain brick building, situated in the Market-place, in which the quarter sessions for the north part of Lindsay were formerly held. This town is famous in history as being the anchorage place of the Danish ships, when the tyrant Sweyne ravaged and laid waste many parts of this country; and who, while carousing with his nobility, was stabbed in the body by an unknown hand, of which wound he died three days after, in great agony. The town was first lighted with gas in 1825; and it is supplied with water, raised from the river Trent by means of a powerful engine. A spring, or spa, the water of which is celebrated for its tonic qualities, rises on the hills, on the east side of the town. The market-day is on Tuesday; and the fairs on the Tuesday after Easter-week and October 20th. The parish of Gainsborough contains the hamlets of MORTON, STOCKWITH and WALKERITH; the population of the whole consisting in 1821, of 6,764 inhabitants.

POST OFFICE, Causeway, Bridge-street, Thomas Brumby, Post Master.—Letters for LONDON and the South are despatched every morning at a quarter past ten, and every afternoon at three.—Letters for LINCOLNSHIRE and YORKSHIRE, are forwarded by a mail cart to SPITAL every morning at half-past ten, and arrive every afternoon at a quarter past three.

GRANTHAM,

A BOROUGH and market town, in the Soke to which it gives name, and in the division of Kesteven, is 110 miles from London, 24 from Lincoln, 21 from Stamford, and 14 from Sleaford. It is situated on the river Witham; on the ancient Roman road called Ermine Street, and the great north road from London to York passes through it. The town comprises four principal streets, the buildings of which have been much improved of late years, and its general appearance is clean, and bespeaks comfort and respectability. The town is governed by one alderman, recorder, twelve common burgesses, a coroner, an escheator, twelve second men, who are the common council, and six constables to attend on the court. The jurisdiction of this corporation extends over the whole of the Soke, comprehending twelve villages; the alderman acts as sheriff for the town and Soke, and sits at the general quarter sessions, held at the Guildhall. This borough first returned members to parliament in the reign of Edward IV.; the present members are, Frederick James Talmash, Esq. and Montague John Cholmeley, Esq. The right of voting is in the freemen of the corporation, the eldest sons of free- men, and those who have served apprenticeship to free- men; the number of electors is about 900, and the alderman is the returning officer. The church, dedi- cated to St. Wolfran, is an elegant stone structure, consisting of a nave and two spacious aisles, with large handsome pointed windows, and is celebrated for its lofty spire, which is 276 feet in height. This beautiful spire was materially injured by the storm of the 20th July, 1797; the lightning appears to have run down the crockets, many of which were broken off, and two of them fell through the roof into the body of the church. The steeple contains a set of musical chimes and a peal of ten bells. The interior of the church is very handsome, and contains a fine toned organ, with a double front, and many very beautiful monuments. The font is adorned with scripture history in relief, and exhibits a fine specimen of ancient sculpture. The living is a vicarage in the incumbency of the Rev. Wm. Potechett. The other places of worship are, a chapel each for the methodists, calvinists and independents. Here are two good charity schools, one of which was founded by Bishop Fox, who was born near this town; and here Sir Isaac Newton received the first rudiments of his education. There is also a national school on the Lancasterian plan, where the children of the poor are gratuitously educated. The canal from Grantham to the river Trent, near Nottingham, an extent of 33 miles, is supplied with water by means of large re- servoirs, made for that purpose; the chief articles conveyed by this navigation are corn and coals. Though this town can boast of no extensive manufactures, Messrs. Wilkins have gained great celebrity in their preparation of glass gunpowder. The land around here is very fertile, and the district is strictly agricul- tural; deriving considerable consequence from the number of gentlemen's seats, which give spirit and ornament to the country several miles round Gran- tham. The weekly market is held on Friday, which is exceedingly well supplied with all the common ne- cessaries of life; and the corn market has become very extensive; considerable business is also done in malt; and the trade generally of this place may be said to be improving. The annual fairs are, on the 5th Monday in Lent, Holy Thursday, July 10th, Oct. 26th, and December 17th, for horses, cattle, &c. The entire parish of Grantham, which extends into the wapentake of Winnibrigs and Threo, con- tained, in 1821, 6,077 persons, of which number Gran- tham borough contained 4,148, and MANTHROP, with LITTLE GONERBY, 1,175 inhabitants.

POST OFFICE, High-street, Thomas S. Lawrence, Post Master.—The LONDON Mail arrives at five minutes after eight in the morning, and is despatched at a quarter after five in the evening.—The EDIN- BURGH Mail arrives at a quarter before five in the afternoon, and is despatched at a quarter before nine in the morning.—The GLASGOW Mail arrives at nine minutes after six in the evening, and is despatched at a quarter before nine in the morning.—A horse mail arrives from CLIFF Row at eight, and is despatched at ten in the morning.

GREAT GRIMSBY,

ANCIENTLY spelled Grymsbye, a borough, market, and sea-port town & parish, in the hundred of Bradley Haverstoe and Lindsey division, is 168 miles from London, 30 north-east of Lincoln and 16 south-east of Hull. It is one of the most ancient boroughs in the kingdom, was formerly rich and populous, and possessed a considerable share of foreign commerce and internal trade. The first charter was granted by King John, and two members, have been returned to parliament ever since the reign of Edward I. At the siege of Calais, by Edward III. Grimsby supplied the king with eleven ships and 170 mariners; but the trade afterwards declined, and the harbour, which had been very commodious, became nearly choked with mud. The consequence of the place has, however, again revived, chiefly through the spirited coalition of some of the principal landed proprietors in this neighbourhood, who set on foot a subscription for improving the harbour, and obtained an act, incorporating them under the name of the 'Grimsby Haven Company.' This dock was opened on the 30th of December, 1800, having been completed at an expense of about £70,000.: since that period the town has otherwise improved, and been extended by the addition of new buildings, contiguous to the haven, and in other parts. Grimsby is not to be noted for any particular manufacture; the coal and corn business, some extensive concerns in the bone trade and bone crushing, breweries, and other branches applicable to local consumption, being the occupation of those engaged in the affairs of traffic. The town is governed by a recorder, high steward, mayor, eleven aldermen, two chamberlains, two coroners, two bailiffs, twelve common councilmen and a common clerk. The proper officers of the corporation are lords of the manor, and hold courts leet and baron; a court of requests is also holden every Wednesday, for the recovery of debts under five pounds; and there are regular quarter sessions held for the borough. The present representatives of the borough, which were elected, after a spirited contest, in 1826, are, Charles Wood, Esq. of Hemsworth, in Yorkshire, and George F. Heneage, Esq. of Hainton hall, in this county. The right of voting is vested in the burgesses, being resident, paying scot and lot; the number of voters is about 400, and the mayor is the returning officer. Here were formerly two parish churches, but that of St. Mary, which was a handsome building, and its steeple a good land-mark for mariners, has been long since taken down. The remaining church, St. James's, is a spacious structure, built in the form of a cross, with a tower in the centre. Originally it was of greater extent, a part of the choir having fallen down about the year 1600. The steeple is a beautiful specimen of English pointed architecture, and appears to have suffered less from the depredations of time than other parts of the church. The alterations it has undergone at different periods by no means correspond with the style of the original building: the living is in the gift of G. F. Heneage, Esq. M. P. and in the incumbency of the Rev. G. C. Tennyson, and the present resident curate is the Rev. G. Oliver. The other places of worship are four in number, for the methodists, calvinists and baptists. The free grammar school, of which the corporation are the trustees, is now entirely supported by their own funds. Here were formerly a monastery of grey friars, a convent of Benedictine nuns, and a priory of Augustine canons; many ancient monuments, removed from these religious houses, are now deposited in St. James's church. In the vicinity of the town are many of those extraordinary fountains, called blow-wells, which furnish a continual flow of water, rising to the surface of the ground, but never overflowing. The country around the town is flat up to the Wold hills, but the soil is generally strong and productive. The weekly market is on Friday, when considerable business is done in corn, and it is exceedingly well supplied with the usual articles of domestic consumption. The only annual fair is on the 6th of June; the one used to be held on the 15th of September being discontinued. In 1801 the borough and parish of Grimsby contained 1,524 persons: in 1811, 2,747: and in 1821 amounted to 3,064.

POST OFFICE, Bull-ring, John Moody, sen. Post Master.—To LONDON, letters are despatched every morning at eight (except Saturday) by a horse post to BRIGG, and arrive every evening (except Monday) at a quarter past six.—To HULL and all other parts of the North of ENGLAND, SCOTLAND & IRELAND, every day by the sailing packet three hours before high water, and arrive by the same packet every day according to the tide.—To LOUTH, NORFOLK, CAMBRIDGE, HUNTINGDON, &c. by the royal mail, at a quarter past eight every morning, and arrive at a quarter before seven every evening.—Office hours: the office is open from six in the morning till half-past nine in the evening (except Sunday) but closes for half an hour prior to the departure of each of the mails.—Letters are not delivered on Sundays after nine in the morning.

HOLBEACH,

MOULTON, WHAPLODE AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

HOLBEACH, or, as it was formerly called, Old-beche, took its name from an old beach, near which the town was built, is a market-town, in the wapentake of Elloe, in the fen country, 109 miles from London, 12 from Boston and about eight from Spalding; it is celebrated in history for having been the birth-place of several very eminent and learned men; amongst the number of which was, Mr. Wm. Stukely, a learned antiquary, who was called, on account of his knowledge of British antiquity, the arch-druid; also Henry Rands, alias Holbeach, who was brought up in the abbey of Ramsey, was one of the compilers of the Liturgy, and was made bishop of Lincoln in 1547. In this town and neighbourhood have been found, at different periods, many valuable specimens of antiquities, particularly a curious urn, various coins, &c. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a fine building, and very spacious, consisting of a nave, chancel, porch, aisles and spire steeple, and the north porch has two circular towers, with embattled parapets at its extreme angles, which gives it the appearance of a castle, more than a place for divine worship. The free grammar school here, was founded by George Farmer, Esq. about the year 1670, who left lands and tenements in Holbeach and Weston, which now let for about £140. per annum; the school was formerly in a part of the church, but in 1807 a new building was erected, capable of holding two hundred children, and it has now one hundred and forty, which are educated upon Bell's system: the present master is the Rev. Robert Carruthers, minister of the church, who has an assistant. The market-day is Thursday: fairs, May 17th and September 17th, for horses and cattle. The population of the parish, in 1821, consisted of 3,621 persons.

MOULTON is a parish, containing a small village, in the same hundred as Holbeach, three miles from that town, with a small church and a free grammar school; and the whole parish contains about 1,600 inhabitants.

WHAPLODE is a parish, containing the small village and chapelry of WHAPLODE-DROVE, in the same hundred as Holbeach, two and a half miles from that town. This is entirely a grazing country, in which are no manufactures, and the trade it enjoys is quite dependent upon the agriculturist and grazier. The whole parish contained, in 1821, about 1,700 persons.

HORNCASTLE

IS a neat market-town and parish, pleasantly situated at the foot of that bold and even range of hills, which, from their openness, have been termed the wolds. It lies nearly in the centre of the Lindsey division of the county of Lincoln, and is the chief of a soke of fifteen parishes, to which it gives name, and is 136 miles from London, 21 from Lincoln, 10 from Spalding, and 9 from Stamford. The principal part of the town is built in an angle, formed by the confluence of two rivers, the Bane and the Waring, where an ancient fortification formerly stood, the site of which is still visible, denoting it to have been a station of importance in early times. Within the last century, the appearance of the town is completely changed. The rebuilding of many houses in the principal streets, in a handsome manner, within the last twenty years, has given to the town an air of respectability; but the effect which would be produced by these buildings, in its general appearance, is materially diminished by the narrowness and irregularity of the streets. The entrances to the town, as well as its general aspect, have been also improved by the enclosure of the fields by which it is surrounded. Since the completion of the canal, in 1801, a considerable trade in corn and wool has been carried on here; about thirty thousand quarters of the former and three thousand sheets of the latter being annually sent to this place, and the town also, from its situation, enjoys a large retail trade. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, though an ancient structure, from the numerous repairs which have been put upon it, has a modern look. The few portions of the original architecture which have escaped the silent ravages of time, and the hands of the innovator, bespeak the building to have been erected about the period of Henry VII. In the wall of the north aisle is a stone, containing the figure of Sir Lyonel Dymoke, in armour, kneeling. Sir Lyonel Dymoke was one of the ancestors of the present family of that name, who perform the office of champion at the coronation of the kings of England. Scrivelsby court, the ancient baronial seat, is about two miles from Horncastle, and at it resides the gentleman who performed the office of champion at the coronation of his present Majesty King George IV. The benefice of this church is a vicarage, in the presentation of the Bishop of Carlisle, and in the incumbency of the Rev. Clement Madeley. The other places of worship are, a chapel each for the Wesleyan and primitive methodists, independents and calvinistic baptists. A building, situated on the south side of the church yard, is appropriated for the purposes of a dispensary, which is supported by subscription. A literary society, which was established here in 1790, formed a permanent library, which is kept at the dispensary, and contains about one thousand volumes, open to the members two days in the week. In the year 1807, an act for the recovery of debts under five pounds was obtained, and the commissioners hold their courts at this place, as well as at the other towns specified in the act, every 4th Thursday. The education of the poor, which has lately excited so much attention in various parts of the kingdom, has not been neglected here. A school on the Lancasterian, or British system, and another on the plan of Dr. Bell, supported by voluntary contributions, instruct about four hundred children. The grammar school was founded by Lord Clinton and Saye, in the year 1652. At present there are about fifty boys in the school, who pay each two guineas per annum. The governors of the grammar school are also trustees of another public school, of a humbler class, for poor girls, founded by Mr. Richard Watson, in 1784. There are now three fairs for horses, cattle and sheep, held here annually. The first, which concludes on the 22nd June, has of late years declined very much, and though chartered for eight days, seldom continues more than three. The second, which terminates on the 21st of August, has long been celebrated as the largest fair for horses in the kingdom, perhaps, it may be said, in the world; it continues about ten days, being three days more than the time expressed in the charter. The third fair, which is held on the 28th and 29th days of October, was removed to this place in 1768, from Market Stainton, a decayed market-town, about eight miles distant, two hundred pounds being given to the lord of the manor of that place, to permit the removal. The market is held here every Saturday, to which it was changed from Wednesday, the day mentioned in the charter, probably in consequence of the markets of Boston and Louth being also on that day. By the census of 1821, the whole parish of Horncastle contained 3,058 inhabitants.

POST OFFICE, Water side, Richard Babington, Post Master.—Letters from LONDON arrive (by gig from Spilsby, where it meets the LONDON and LOUTH mails) every afternoon at half-past three, and are despatched every morning at half-past ten. The LINCOLN and North mail arrives every afternoon at three, and is dispatched every morning at four.

KIRTON

IS a market-town and parish, in the hundred of Corringham and division of Lindsay, 147 miles north of London, 18 north of Lincoln, and 10 north-east of Gainsborough, pleasantly situated near the summit and on the western side of a commanding eminence, and belongs to the dukedom of Cornwall: the Hon. John Reginald Lygon Pinder holding the manorial estate by lease, from the chancellor of the duchy. The quarter sessions for the division of Lindsay are held here, in the sessions-court, at the Bridewell, in the week after Epiphany and Easter, the first Friday after the 7th of July, and the Friday in the first week after the 11th of October. On Kirton-green stands the duchy court-house, a handsome brick building, where the manorial courts are held, and where the records are kept: near to this building is the national school (formerly the grammar school), in which upwards of one hundred children are educated. The church, dedicated to St. Peter and St. Paul, is a massive and ancient building; the living is in the patronage of the sub-dean of Lincoln, and in the incumbency of the Rev. D. S. Wayland. The new and old connexion of methodists have each a chapel here, as have also the baptists. The weekly market is on Saturday; and the two annual fairs are on the 18th of July and 11th of December, for stock and pedlery. In 1821 this place contained about 1,500 inhabitants.

POST OFFICE, Crown Inn, Market-place, Robert Atkinson, Post Master.—Letters are despatched at three, and arrive at five every afternoon.

LINCOLN AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

LINCOLN, an ancient city, the see of a bishop, and capital of the county to which it gives name, is 132 miles north by west of London, 36 north-west of Boston, 34 south of Barton-upon-Humber, 26 from Louth, 18 south-east of Gainsborough, and 16 from Market Rasen. It is a place of considerable importance in the ecclesiastical and military annals of the kingdom; and is pleasantly situated on the summit and declivity of a bold eminence, the base of which is washed by the river Witham. A large portion of the city, or rather suburbs, extends in a long street, from the foot of the hill to the south; whilst another suburb on the northern side, called Newport, is without the walls. As a military station, occupied by a colony of the Romans, it must have been a place of some extent and consequence, as is evident from the vestiges that remain, and from the various discoveries made at different periods. The most prominent object of this city, as well as the most interesting, as a subject of history, antiquity and art, is the cathedral, one of the largest sacred edifices in the kingdom; its architectural magnificence corresponds with its magnitude, and it is justly styled, 'the pride and glory of Lincoln.' Nor is the contemplation of this noble pile confined to the inhabitants of the city, for its situation being on the summit of a hill, and the country to the south-east and south-west being flat, it can be seen at the distance of twenty miles; and previous to the spires being removed, they were frequently seen at twice that distance. The first foundations of this ancient fabric were laid by Remigius, in the year 1086; and in 1124 the church was burnt down. Between that period and 1186 it was rebuilt, and in succeeding ages received various erections, increasing its grandeur and extent. It consists of a nave, with its aisles; a transept at the west end; and two other transepts, one near the centre, and the other towards the eastern end; also a choir and chancel, with their aisles, of corresponding height and width with the nave and aisles. The great transept has a nave towards the east; attached to the western side of this transept is a galilee, or grand porch; and on the southern side of the eastern aisle are two oratories, or private chapels; while the northern side has one of nearly similar shape and character. The church is ornamented with three towers, one at the centre and two at the western end; these are lofty, and decorated with varied tracery, pillars, pilasters, windows, &c. In one of these is a prodigious large bell, called 'Tom of Lincoln,' which is near five tons in weight and twenty-three feet in compass. On the north side of, and connected with the cathedral, are the cloisters, of which only three sides remain in the original state. Attached to the eastern side is the chapter-house, a lofty elegant structure; forming a decagon, the groined roof of which is supported by an umbilical pillar, consisting of a circular shaft, with ten small fluted columns attached to it, having a band in the centre, with foliated capitals. One of the ten sides forms the entrance; in the other sides are nine windows, having pointed arches, with two lights each. Over the north side of the cloisters is the library, which contains a large collection of books, and some curious specimens of Roman antiquities. Besides monasteries, nunneries, and other edifices for pious uses, Lincoln had formerly more than fifty churches. Eleven only, exclusive of the cathedral, now remain; and scarcely any of them merit a particular description. Those most worthy of notice are, St. Benedicts', St. Mary de Wigford's, and St. Peter's, at Gowts: these have lofty square towers, in the Norman style. St. Peter's is a very ancient structure, and appears to have been the chapel of some religious house, of which the remains are extant. Besides the churches there are eight other places of worship in Lincoln, appropriated to the use of the various dissenters, Roman catholics and quakers. The religious societies are, several auxiliary missionary associations, branch Bible and tract societies. Several liberally-endowed and well-conducted schools, imparting honour to the city, and gratuitous education to the rising generation of both sexes, are established here; amongst which Christ's hospital, founded in 1602, by Richard Smith, claims precedence; fifty boys are educated, lodged and clothed, by this charity; the governors are, the mayor for the time being, and some other members of the corporation: the grammar school, established in 1567, educates about twenty-five boys; the free school, in the Bail, for twelve boys; the national school gives education to about three hundred boys and two hundred girls; and there are various Sunday-schools, in which a great number of children besides, of both sexes, are instructed. The charitable institutions and societies are, the county hospital, dispensary, lunatic asylum, lying-in charity, the Dorcas charity, a benevolent society, several sick clubs, and various friendly associations. Here are several libraries and news' rooms, a theatre and assembly rooms. Races are held annually, on the Wednesday, Thursday and Friday in the week after Doncaster races, about half a mile west of the town, where an elegant stand has been erected for the accommodation of the votaries of the turf. Few places in the kingdom exhibit so many ancient remains as Lincoln. Saxon, Norman and pointed arches, and door-ways with turrets, walls, mullions of windows, and other fragments of old dilapidated buildings appear in every direction. Its numerous churches and religious houses, the vestiges of which occasionally meet the eye of the enquiring traveller, are highly interesting to the antiquary, as tending to illustrate the progress of the arts, and the history of past ages.

POST OFFICE, High-street, St. Mary's, John Wold Drury, Post Master.—Letters from LONDON and the South arrive at eleven in the morning, and are despatched at half-past three in the afternoon. From HULL, WHITBY and YORK, letters arrive at half-past three in the afternoon, and are despatched at eleven in the morning. From WRAGBY, HORNCASTLE, and the East, letters arrive every morning at seven, and are despatched at half-past eleven. From NEWARK and the West letters arrive at half-past ten in the morning, and are despatched at seven in the morning.

* * * There are two deliveries in the day; the first commencing soon after the arrival of the London mail, and the second immediately after the arrival of the Hull mail.——A receiving-box is placed also at Mr. Peck's, Castle-hill.

Of the castle built by the Norman conqueror, very little now remains, except part of the old wall, and the ancient gateway, and the area is occupied by buildings appropriated to uses of the municipal power. The few remaining vestiges convey the same idea of original Norman architecture as that of York, erected nearly at the same period. The keep was not included, but stood half without and half within the castle wall, which ascended up the slopes of the hill, and joined the great tower. This being situated on a high artificial mound, it was equally inaccessible from within or without the castle area. It was nearly round, and covered the summit of the mount. The walls are above seven feet in thickness. In a corner of the area is a curious small building, appearing on the outside like a tower, called Cobb's hall, which, it is thought, was originally used as a chapel. Adjoining to St. Andrew's church-yard formerly stood the palace of the celebrated John o' Gaunt, and opposite is a large building, in the Norman style, called John o' Gaunt's stables. The city has of late years been considerably improved, and is now well lighted, watched and paved. The conduits are amongst the most serviceable erections, as they not only supply the town with pure water, but are in themselves ornamental.

The government of the city is vested in the corporation, which consists of a mayor, twelve aldermen, two sheriffs, twenty-six common councilmen, four chamberlains, a recorder, steward of the courts of borough trade, a town clerk, four coroners, sword and mace bearers, four serjeants-at-key, constables, &c. This city is a county of itself; having subject to it four townships in the vicinity—Bracebridge, Canwick, Branston and Waddington, called the 'liberty of Lincoln.' This privilege was conferred in the third year of George I. and in official acts it is denominated 'the city and county of the city of Lincoln.' Its viscountial jurisdiction extends twenty miles round; a privilege unequalled by that of any city in the kingdom. In the history of the boroughs of Great Britain, it is said, 'this city had summons, with London and York, to send members to parliament, the forty-ninth of Henry III.' The right of election is considered to be in the freemen; the number of voters at the last election was 1233, when J. N. Fazakerley, Esq. of Stoodley House, Devon, and C. D. W. Sibthorpe, Esq. of Canwick Hall, were chosen representatives in parliament of this ancient city. Lincoln, though not the seat of any fixed manufacture, possesses many local advantages as a commercial station; it has an extensive trade in corn and wool, of which great quantities are exported into Yorkshire, by vessels which obtain a back freightage of coals and other necessary articles for the use of the interior. Here are five principal market places, viz. the butter market, in High-street; the butchery, in a lane to which it gives name; the cattle and sheep market, near the east end of St. Swithin's church; the corn market, in an open square called Cornhill; and the fish market, at the High bridge. The weekly market is on Friday; and the annual fairs are, the second Tuesday after April 12th (which lasts four days) for horses, cattle, &c.; the Friday in Easter week; a midsummer pleasure fair; on the 5th of July for horses and cattle; the 28th of November, for cattle; and the last Friday in September, a great market or fair for stock. A fortnight stock market is also held on alternate Wednesdays; and statutes, for hiring servants, are held on the first, second and third Fridays after old May-day. The population of the several parishes in the city, bail, close and liberty of 'the city and county of the city of Lincoln' was as follows: in 1801, 8,684—in 1811, 10,207—and in 1821, 11,776; of which last number, 1,781 were inhabitants of BRACEBRIDGE, BRANSTON, CANWICK and WADDINGTON.

LOUTH,

A MARKET-TOWN and parish, in the wold division of the hundred of Louth Eske, and parts of Lindsay, 148 miles from London, 26 from Lincoln, 16 from Market Rasen, and 15 from Spilsby, is pleasantly situated in a fertile valley, sheltered on the north and south by sloping hills, the summits of which command numerous and varied prospects. It was anciently called Luda, from its proximity to the Ludd, a small rivulet, formed by the confluence of two streams. In this town were anciently established three religious fraternities, called 'the guild of our Blessed Lady, the guild of the Holy Trinity, and the Chantry of John of Louth.' King Edward VI. alienated the funds of these guilds, and granted them for the purpose of erecting and endowing a free grammar school. The lands then produced £40. per annum, but are now let at £400. One half of the produce was granted for a head master's salary, one-fourth for the ushers, and the remainder for the perpetual maintenance of twelve poor women. The trustees of this foundation were incorporated by the name of 'the warden and six assistants of the town of Louth, and free school of King Edward VI. in Louth.' Another free school, on a very respectable scale, was founded in pursuance of the will of Dr. Mapletoft, Dean of Ely, bearing date August 17th, 1677. The church of St. James is a spacious edifice, consisting of a nave and two aisles, with an elegant tower and spire at the west end. The east end, which presents a fine elevation, exhibits a large central window, having six upright mullions and varied tracery, with two lateral windows opening into the aisles. The chancel is of more modern date than the body of the church, and is probably coeval with the justly admired steeple. The tower part of the steeple consists of three stories; each stage terminates with elegant pediments, supported by ornamental corbels; in this manner diminishing to the top, where are four octagonal embattled turrets. At eighty feet from the base, round the exterior of the tower, runs a gallery, guarded by a parapet wall; and at the height of one hundred and seventy feet the battlements commence. The top stone projects with a cornice; the height of the spire to the cross is one hundred and forty-one feet, and the total height of the whole is two hundred and eighty-eight. The living of St. James is a vicarage, in the gift of the Rev. Dr. Goddard, prebend of Louth, and in the incumbency of the Rev. Wolley Jolland. In Louth was formerly another church, named St. Mary's; it is now totally demolished, but the churchyard is the place of sepulture for the town. The dissenters from the establishment have five places of worship; one for the catholics, one each for the baptists, Wesleyan and primitive methodists, and independents. The other principal buildings are a town-hall, an assembly room, and a theatre. The civil government of the town is vested in the warden and six assistants, incorporated, as already mentioned, by Edward VI. A carpet and blanket manufactory is established here, a large manufactory of soap, and a mill for making coarse paper. In the year 1761 an act was obtained for cutting a canal between Louth and the North sea. It commences about half a mile from the town, and keeps parallel with the Ludd, which supplies it with water: leaving the river about four miles from the town, it sweeps to the north, and joins the sea at a place called Terney-lock. By this canal vessels of considerable burthen regularly trade to London, Hull, and several parts of Yorkshire, carrying out corn and wool, and bringing home timber, coals, grocery, &c. In Louth and its vicinity are various springs of a very peculiar nature, worthy of investigation by the philosopher and chymist, some of which flow in summer but are dry in winter. The regular market-day is Wednesday, and there is another, kept by custom, on Saturday, for meat, butter, vegetables, &c. The fairs are, the third Monday after Easter, and on the 23rd of November. According to the census of 1821 the parish of Louth contained 6,055 inhabitants, of which number 43 were resident in the hamlet of LOUTH-PARK.

POST OFFICE, Eastgate, Sarah Allison, Post Mistress.—To LONDON the mail is despatched through BOSTON, SPILSBY, &c. every morning at eleven, and arrives from LONDON every afternoon at four.—To GRIMSBY the mail is despatched at a quarter past four every afternoon, and arrives at half-past ten every morning.—To SHEFFIELD, GAINSBOROUGH, BAWTRY, &c. the mail goes every morning at a quarter before six, and arrives at half-past seven every evening.—Office hours—The office closes for the LONDON bags at half-past ten in the morning. Letters are delivered every morning at nine and afternoon at half-past four (except Sundays) when they are delivered in the forenoon only.

MARKET RASEN,

COMMONLY, but improperly written Raisen, and sometimes Raisin, is a small and well-built market town, situated on the small stream called the Rase, from which it takes its name. It is in the hundred of Walshcroft, distant from London 148 miles, and from Lincoln and Louth sixteen. The town has an air of neatness and cleanness about it, that immediately prepossesses the stranger in its favour; and the surrounding country, though generally flat, is extremely fertile and beautiful. There is no trade carried on here, except retail trade, and there is nothing remarkable in the town, except the peculiar form of the upper windows, in the embattled tower of the church, which have a pointed arch divided into two pointed lights, and a quatrefoil head; up the centre goes a strong mullion, crossed by a transom, terminating at the imposts; on the south side of the tower is a representation of our first parent on the branches of a fruit tree, on the trunk of which is the dart of death; in allusion to the effects of eating the forbidden fruit. In the endowment of this living, the vicar is entitled to the unusual tithe of ale. The living is in the patronage of the King, and the present incumbent is the Rev. Edward Walter. The Roman catholics, methodists, and independents have each a chapel here, with Sunday schools attached, besides which there is a national school for boys and another for girls. The market day is Tuesday, and the annual fair on the 25th of September. The population of the parish of Market Rasen, in 1821, was 1,166.

POST OFFICE, King-street, Elizabeth Cox, Post Mistress.—Letters for LONDON, the South and West, are despatched at half-past seven in the morning, and arrive at half-past five in the evening. For the South, East & North, letters are despatched at half-past five in the evening, and arrive at seven in the morning.

SALTFLEET,

A MARKET-TOWN and parish, joined to SKID-BROKE, in the wapentake of Louth Eske and parts of Lindsay, is 165 miles from London, about 39 from Lincoln, and 10 east of Louth, the last named being the nearest post town. This town, formerly, was a place of considerable importance, and so late as about thirty years ago had a good market, and shipped large quantities of corn; but the opening of the Louth river has nearly destroyed its market and trade. Tradition states that the old town was,
with many others on the coast, inundated by the sea;
and recent discoveries of stones and foundations,
a short distance from the present low water mark,

give support to the record. Here is a valuable bed of oysters resorted to by the neighbouring fishermen; and upon the beach is a commodious inn,
which commands a fine view of the German ocean,
and the country inland, which round here is very fertile. The church is at Skidbroke, about three quarters of a mile distant; it is a rectory, in the patronage of Oriel college, and in the incumbency of the Rev. John M. Phillips. A fair is held on the 3rd of October for all kinds of stock, and it is particularly noted for good foals. The number of inhabitants in Saltfleet and SKIDBROKE, in 1821, was 550.

SLEAFORD AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

SLEAFORD (New) a parish and market town, in the hundred of Flaxwell, 113 miles north of London, and 18 south of Lincoln, is seated on a small rivulet, called the Sleas, which rises in the vicinity, and runs to Chapel-hill, where it augments the waters of the river Witham. The town is respectable in its appearance, populous and lively, continually improving in its buildings and trade, which is advantaged by its thoroughfare situation; being on the main road from Lincoln to the metropolis, as well as by the canal, which opens, by means of Witham, a communication with Boston, Lincoln, and the river Trent. The church is a handsome, spacious structure, and, from a manuscript found in the parish chest, appears to have been built in the year 1271, by Roger Blunt and Roger Brickham, of Sleaford, merchants. It consists of a chancel, nave, transept and two aisles, with a tower, crowned by a spire, which rises to the height of 144 feet. The windows, pinnacles and ornaments are all greatly diversified, and some of them particularly elegant. In the chancel are several monuments in memory of the Carr family; by one of whom a free-school was erected and liberally endowed, as well as an hospital for twelve poor men. The living is a discharged vicarage, in the incumbency of the Rev.

Richard Yerburch, and the presentation is with the Earl of Birstol. The other places of worship are a chapel each for the methodists, Lady Huntingdon's connexion, and independents. The quarter sessions for the parts of Kesteven are held four times a year, and a court of requests for the recovery of debts
under five pounds, on the first Wednesday in each month. The market day is on Monday, and there are five fairs in the year, viz:—Plow-Monday, Easter-Monday, and Whit-Monday, for horses, cattle and sheep; 11th of August, for provisions; and the 20th of October, for cattle and sheep. This town contained, in 1821, 2,094 inhabitants.

OLD SLEAFORD is a hamlet, in the parish of Quarrington, adjoining to New Sleaford, and containing,
by the last returns, 215 inhabitants.

POST OFFICE, Market-place, SLEAFORD, Charles Smith, Post Master.—The Mail to LONDON is despatched at twenty-six minutes past five in the afternoon, and arrives at eleven minutes before nine in the morning.—The Mail to LINCOLN is despatched at a quarter past nine in the morning, and arrives at half-past five in the afternoon.

SPALDING,

AND THE VILLAGES OF PINCHBECK, SURFLEET AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

SPALDING, a market-town and parish, in the hundred of Elloe and parts of Holland, is 103 miles from London, 38 south-east of Lincoln, and 8 west of Holbeach, being in the midst of a fenny district, and almost encompassed by the river Welland, and an ancient drain, called the Westlode, and having numerous other drains in the vicinity, Spalding has been, with some degree of propriety, compared to a Dutch town. Its claim to antiquity is testified by many remains discovered in and about the town; and that it existed before the foundation of Croyland abbey, is evinced by Ethelbald's charter to that monastery. The church is an ancient light structure, built in the year 1284; its beautiful porch, however, appears to have been added about the end of the fifteenth century. It is dedicated to St. Mary and St. Nicholas, and the living is a curacy, in the patronage of certain trustees, and incumbency of the Rev. Wm. Moore. The other places of worship are for the general and particular baptists, methodists, independents, and a friends' meeting house. A free grammar school was erected in the reign of Elizabeth, by the will of John Blanch. Another, called the petty school, was founded in 1682, by Thomas Wellesley: here is also a blue-coat charity school. An almshouse, for twenty-two persons, was founded in 1590; and another, for eight widows, in 1709. The town-hall, or court-house, erected at the expense of Mr. John Holstan, is situated at the north-west end of the Market-place, the upper rooms are used for the quarter sessions, the courts leet and baron, and the courts of request and sewers; the lower part of the building is let for shops, and the rents appropriated to the use of the poor, conformable to the will of the donor. A new house of correction for the parts of Holland was erected here in 1824; and there is a small theatre in the town, which is occasionally open for the amusement of the inhabitants. In 1710 a literary, scientific and antiquarian society, called 'the gentlemen's society,' was established, and held in very

SPILSBY,

BOLINGBROKE, NEW BOLINGBROKE AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

SPILSBY, a small market-town and parish, in the soke of Bolingbroke and division of Lindsay, is 133 miles from London, 31 from Lincoln, and 14 from Stamford, situated on an eminence, overlooking to the south a large track of marsh and fen-land, which is bounded by the Boston deeps and German ocean. This town consists of four streets, that unite in the Market-place, and which form a spacious square; at the east end is the market-cross, a plain octagonal shaft, with a quadrangular base, terminated with a modern fane, the whole being situated on five steps. Here is a town hall, in which are held the general quarter sessions of the peace for the south division of the parts of Lindsay; an endowed grammar school, and two Sunday-schools. The church, dedicated to St. James, is an ancient stone edifice, the living of which is in the patronage of Lord Gwydir (the lord of the manor) and in the incumbency of the Rev. J. Holloway. Two chapels, one each for the methodists and calvinists, are the other places of worship here. At the White Hart Inn is a subscription library and news' room. The market is held on Monday; and the fairs on the Monday before, and first and second Monday after Whit-Monday (when Whitsuntide does not fall in May there is no fair on the latter day); and on the third Monday in July, for cattle and clothing. The population of the parish, in 1821, consisted of 1,234 inhabitants.

BOLINGBROKE, a parish, once a market-town, in the western division of the soke to which it gives name, and in the parts of Lindsay, is 4 miles w.s.w. of Spilsby and 132 north of London; it is seated on a clear and rapid brook, from which its name is derived, was once a place of considerable importance, and is remarkable for being the birth-place of Henry IV. The church, dedicated to St. Peter and St. Paul, is a neat small ancient structure of stone, of the Gothic form, with a square tower; the living is a rectory, united with Hareby, in the gift of the Right Hon. — Quin, and the Rev. Dr. Strong is the incumbent. Here is a free school, founded by Mr. Chamberlain, in 1588, and a methodist chapel. The King, as Duke of Lancaster, is lord of the manor. Bolingbroke gives title of viscount to the family of St. John, of Lydiard Tregrove, in Wiltshire. The town lies flat, in an agricultural district; the land is fertile, and the country around hilly, interspersed with pleasing views. About 800 inhabitants form the population of this parish.

NEW BOLINGBROKE, 7 miles s.s.w. of Bolingbroke, and 8 from Horncastle, is a recently erected town, to which place the market of the old town was removed in 1821, where it is now held, on Tuesday; the fair on the 10th of July being kept at both places. A methodist chapel has recently been erected here, and it is said that the commissioners for building churches have consented to erect one at this new settlement. The population of this place has not been taken.

STAMFORD AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

STAMFORD, an ancient borough and market-town, on the southern point of Lincolnshire, and in the division of Kesteven, is 89 miles from London, 44 from Lincoln, and eight from Market Deeping. One parish of the town is in the county of Northampton; but the chief portion of it is built on the side of a hill in Lincolnshire, and when approached from the south, presents an interesting and picturesque appearance; several old buildings, with towers and steeples, being seen grouped together. The name of the town is supposed to be derived from the Saxon Stæn and ford, and according to some antiquaries, Stamford was a place of note in the time of Bladud, a British king, many centuries before the Christian era; but the earliest authority upon which we can depend, is that of Henry of Huntingdon, a writer of the twelfth century, who relates that the ancient enemies of England, the Picts and Scots, having ravaged the country as far as Stamford to the south, were there met and defeated by the Saxons, under the command of Hengist; and that King Vortigern, for such valour, gave to the Saxon leader certain portions of land in the county of Lincoln. In William the Conqueror's reign Stamford was governed by the lagemen, or aldermen. In the first year of Edward IV. a charter was granted to it, when its civil officers were incorporated; they consist of a mayor, 12 aldermen, who act as magistrates, and 24 common councilmen. The same monarch who raised Stamford to the dignity of a corporate town, bestowed upon it the privilege of returning members to parliament, which it has uninterruptedly enjoyed. At the last election (1826) Lord Thomas Cecil, brother of the Marquis of Exeter, and Captain Thomas Chaplin were the representatives elected. The right of voting is vested in the whole of the inhabitants paying scot and lot, and the mayor is the returning officer. In 1547 an act of parliament was obtained to divide the northern part of the town into five parishes, St. Martin's, or Stamford Baron, being a distinct parish. St. Michael's church, which stands near the centre of the town, is supposed to be the most ancient erection, part of it having existed antecedent to the year 1230. The church of St. Mary appears to have been built towards the latter end of the thirteenth century, and possibly upon the site of one much earlier. St. George's, a large plain building, was built in 1450, by William Bruges, the first garter king at arms. All Saints' is a structure well proportioned, and of large dimensions: at the west end of the north aisle rises the steeple, a lofty handsome structure, surmounted by a spire of a similar form, crocketed at the angles from the base to the summit. The church of St. John the Baptist was rebuilt about 1452. The other places of worship are, chapels for the independents, Wesleyan methodists, calvinists and Roman catholics. There are three free schools; one called Radcliffe's, another denominated Well's, or the petty school, and a blue-coat school. The ancient and modern institutions for the support of the poor are many in number; the most prominent is one founded by Wm. Browne, in the reign of Richard III. which has a chapel at the eastern end. Another was erected by the will of Mr. Thomas Truesdale, in 1700, with endowments bequeathed to it for ever; and in addition to these, are certain charities, denominated callises; with various other foundations of the like nature. The principal public building is the town-hall, near St. Mary's church, built in 1776, where the civil business is transacted; it consists of two handsome fronts, containing twenty apartments, a guard-room, house of correction, and a gaol. A small theatre, in St. Mary's-street, was built here in 1768; and the assembly-rooms, in St. George's-square, in 1725. 'The Stamford and Rutland new infirmary' is a very elegant building of stone, about a quarter of a mile from Stamford, on the road to Deeping, and overlooks a beautiful part of the country. A singular custom, called bull-running, which has been instituted nearly six hundred years, is held here annually, on the festival of St. Brice; the circumstances which gave rise to this plebian carnival are said to be as follow: William, Earl of Warren, lord of the town, in the reign of King John, observing two bulls contending for a cow, and that all the butchers' dogs were alarmed at their bellowing, ran out, and singling one of them, pursued it through the streets: this so pleased the Earl, that he gave all the meadow where it commenced (after the first crop was off) for a common, to the butchers of the town, on condition that they should find a bull six weeks before every Christmas to perpetuate the sport. Here the custom of borough English prevails, by which the younger son inherits from a father dying intestate. Near this town is the elegant residence of the Marquis of Exeter. In the neighbourhood of Helpstone, a few miles from Stamford, a Roman villa has just been discovered, with a fine tessellated pavement; and near Wansford an ironfoundry of the Romans, with the furnace, &c. entire. Stamford is not a place of manufactures: the principal trade here is malting, and the shops, which are many and respectable, supply the surrounding villages with various necessities. The town is well lighted with gas, and benefited by a number of fine springs of water. It is surrounded by delightful woody hills, groves and land, producing the most luxuriant pasturage, whilst a variety of beautiful landscapes present themselves on many sides, including the river Welland, which runs to the south of the town, parting it from Stamford Baron, and is navigable for boats and barges from the sea to this place. The market days are Monday and Friday: the fairs are, 'Candlemas fair,' the Tuesday before the 13th of February; 'Mid-lent horse fair,' March 10th; 'Town fair,' Midlent Monday; 'May fair,' Monday before 12th May; 'Corpus Christi fair,' June 9th; and 'St. James's fair,' August 6th. The cattle fairs and markets are, January 4th, September 5th, October 3rd, November 8th, and December 5th. Races are held in June, and are generally well attended.

STAMFORD BARON, already named, is separated from the town only by a stone bridge, yet it is both a distinct parish and liberty, in the county of Northampton; hence its original name of Stamford beyond the bridge. In 1455 it was held by the Abbot of Peterborough, per baroniam, and was then first denominated Stamford Baron. This place is designated in the doomsday-book, as being the sixth ward belonging to Stamford, situated in Hantunescire. Where the alms-house is now erected an hospital formerly stood, dedicated to St. John the Baptist. The church is a large handsome building, dedicated to St. Martin, and founded by Bishop Russell in the reign of Edward IV. It consists of a nave, two chancels, north and south aisles, and a square pinnacled tower at the west end of the former. The population of Stamford, and Stamford Baron, which latter includes the hamlet of Woodthorpe, consisted in 1821 of 6,276 inhabitants.

SUTTON (LONG)

GEDNEY, FLEET AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

SUTTON, or Sutton St. Mary, is a small but improving market-town and parish, in the hundred of Elloe and division of Holland, 107 miles north from London and 5 from Holbeach. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a neat structure, with a spire of frame work, covered with lead, formerly used as a land mark. The living is a rectory, and the Rev. T. L. Bennett is the patron and incumbent. Here is a free grammar school, supported by 'Phillips' charity,' for the education of forty children. An act of parliament has recently been obtained, for the purpose of erecting a bridge over the Cross Keys' wash, about three miles S. E. of this place, and which stupendous undertaking will unite Lincolnshire with Norfolk: this wash is a large estuary, under water when the tide is in, and passable for travellers from the wash-house in Lincolnshire, but the passage is extremely dangerous without a guide, and many lives have been lost in attempting to ford it; of course the bridge, when completed, will become a great accommodation, and will, no doubt, have the effect of infusing into the market of Long Sutton more importance than it now possesses. The market-day is on Friday, and since its revival in 1824 has been tolerably well-attended and supplied. About 2,400 persons form the population of this parish.

GEDNEY, about two miles south-east of Holbeach, is a village and parish, remarkable for its beautiful church, built, as Dr. Stukeley supposes, by the abbots of Crowland, who had a house on the north side of the church, and large possessions in the parish; the upper part of the tower is of the same date with the church, but built upon other work. The number of inhabitants in the parish, including the chapelry of GEDNEY HILL, is about 1,800.

FLEET, a village and parish, near Holbeach, is remarkable for the steeple standing at a distance from the church. Here was found, not many years ago, three pecks of Roman copper coins, piled down edgeways, most of them of the Emperor Gallienus. The number of inhabitants in this parish, according to the last census, was about 800.

SWINESHEAD,

A PARISH and small market town, in the wapentake of Kirton, and division of Holland, is 113 miles north of London and 7 west of Boston. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a handsome building with a lofty spire; and the living is a discharged vicarage, in the patronage of Trinity college, Cambridge. Here is besides a chapel for the methodists, and a charity school, founded and endowed by T. Cowley, in 1720, for the instruction of 35 children. The sea formerly came up to the town, and there was a haven near to the present Market-place; and, about 30 years ago, a bridge was taken down, which crossed a navigable river, now choked up. Not more than 70 years since the state of this part of the country was such, that in wet seasons, strangers travelling from hence to Sea-ford, were obliged to take a guide. King John lost all his baggage and barely escaped with his life, whilst crossing the Cross Keys wash, near this place. The weekly market is chartered to be holden on Thursday, but so little business is now done, out of the ordinary course, that it is scarcely recognised as a market day. The parish contained, in 1821, 1,696 inhabitants.

TATTERSHALL AND CONINGSBY.

TATTERSHALL, a small market town & parish, in the hundred of Gartree, 128 miles N.E. of London and 9 s.w. of Horncastle, is situated on the river Bane, near its junction with the Witham. This place was granted by William the Conqueror to Eudo, one of his Norman followers, a descendant of whom erected a stately castle here; they were barons of parliament, and from this place assumed the name of Tattershall. The castle, demolished in the civil wars, stood on a moorish level, surrounded by two great fosses, supplied with water from the Bane. The principal gateway was remaining till within a few years back; the part at present standing was built by Sir Ralph Cromwell, who was treasurer of the exchequer in the reign of Henry VI. The church, which stands on the east-side of the outer moat, is a beautiful and spacious edifice, built in the form of a cross, consisting of a nave, a transept, and magnificent choir; the latter of which has been totally neglected, since the fine painted windows were carried to the chapel of Burleigh, being a present from Lord Fortescue to the Earl of Exeter; who promised to supply their place with plain glass; for want of which the inside has suffered much from the weather. some beautiful fragments still remain in the windows of the transepts, while others have been blocked up. The market is on Thursday, and the fairs on the Friday after 4th May, 14th May, 25th September.

WAINFLEET, a market town, consisting of the two parishes, All Saints and St. Mary's, in the wapentake of Candleshoe, 131 miles from London, and 9 miles from Spilsby, is situated in a marsh, on a small creek, through which the river Limb flows into the Boston Deep. It is not improbable that, previous to the decay of the harbour, this town was situated higher up the creek, for the church of All Saints stands at a place called High Wainfleet; it is a handsome edifice, and has a brick tower of modern date. In the south aisle is an alabaster monument, erected by William Patten, alias Wainfleet, bishop of Winchester, to the memory of his father, who was born here, and founded an excellent free school. The living of All Saints is a rectory, in the patronage of the King, and in the incumbency of the Rev. Robt. Cholmeley. The benefice of Wainfleet, St. Mary's, is in the presentation of the governors of Bethlem hospital, and the curacy of St. Thomas', in NORTHOLME. The dissenting places of worship are a methodist chapel and a friends' meeting house. The haven appears to have been more capacious than at present; and is said to have been the place where the Romans made salt from the sea water, to supply the whole province; but the creek is now only navigable for lighters and small vessels. The market day is on

NORTHUMBERLAND

IS a maritime, and the most northern county in England: it is bounded on the east by the German ocean, on the west by Scotland and Cumberland, on the north by the river Tweed and the Cheviot hills, and its southern part borders with an irregular line, on Cumberland and Durham. Its natural boundaries are in most parts mountains and rivers; and its form is a triangle, the sides of which are unequal. For size it is amongst the largest counties, its greatest length being nearly 70 miles; its breadth at the southern extremity, from east to west, about 48; and its circumference about 230 miles. Part of this county is occupied by certain hundreds in the county of Durham, viz. Northamshire, Hlandshire and Bedlingtonshire; this singularly local circumstance perhaps may account for the variance of writers in stating the square miles and acreage of the county, some giving to it about 1,500 square miles, and 817,200 acres; others computing Northumberland to contain 1,810 square miles, and 1,157,760 acres. To reconcile these discrepancies, must be, to take the lowest computation as excluding the land of those hundreds appertaining to Durham, and the highest as permitting it to form a part of the calculation.

NAME and ANCIENT HISTORY.—This county received its name from the Saxons, by whom it was called Northan-Humber-land, signifying the land or county north of the Humber. It was anciently of much greater extent than at present, comprehending Yorkshire, Durham, Lancashire, Westmoreland and Cumberland; and was a distinct kingdom of the Saxon Heptarchy. At the time of the invasion of Briton by the Romans, this county, with several others adjoining, was inhabited by the Ottadini, Ottadeni, or Ottatini, a people supposed to have been so called from their situation near the river Tyne; who, being uneasy under the Roman yoke, conspired with the Caledonians, in the reign of the Emperor Severus, & emancipated themselves from his government: this prince, dying soon after, left the original possessors masters of this province, till Theodosius, some time after landing in England, reduced them. After the Romans withdrew, the Britons called in the aid of the Saxons to assist them against the Scots and Picts, and these wily allies having vanquished their enemies, settled here themselves, and divided part of the island into seven kingdoms, of which Northumberland, afterwards called Bernicia, was the chief.

SOIL and CLIMATE.—The face of the country in this large district is various, but in the aggregate inclining to nakedness; and although agricultural industry and perseverance have accomplished much, and overcome difficulties of magnitude; many parts still continue sterile, and to the farmer or grazier almost valueless. The mountainous parts, absolutely unfit for tillage, comprise nearly one-third of the land. The most fertile tracts are those on the east side, in the vales through which the rivers run, in their course to the sea; and the vale of Coquet is particularly noted for its fertility. Woods are chiefly confined to the banks of rivers. The Cheviot hills, near the north angle, are the most valuable of the mountainous tract, affording pasturage to innumerable flocks of sheep peculiar to them.—The CLIMATE of Northumberland is subject to much variation, but the air is not so cold as might be expected, from its situation, so far to the north; for as it lies between the German and Irish seas, in the narrowest part of England, it has the advantage of being warmed by the sea vapours, and hence the snow seldom lies long, except in the most northern parts and on the tops of lofty mountains. The air is also more salubrious than might be imagined in a country bordering on the sea; and the inhabitants are noted for their strength, robust health and longevity.

RIVERS.—This county is extremely well watered with fine rivers, the chief of which are, the TWEED, which rises in Scotland and falls into the German sea at Berwick: the SOUTH TYNE rises near Alston moor, and joins the North Tyne near Hexham: the NORTH TYNE rises in a mountain called Tyne Head, passes Newcastle, and discharges itself into the German ocean, a little below Tynemouth: the COQUET rises on the borders of Scotland, a little to the north of the source of the Read, and falls into the sea at Warkworth: and the READ rises on the western borders of this county, and reaches the North Tyne, near Bellingham.

PRODUCE and MANUFACTURES.—The products of this county are cattle, sheep, wool, corn, lead and coals. The last named production standing the first in consequence of all the others: it is computed that upwards of 10,000 persons are employed in the collieries which abound in the north-east parts, and that subsistence is given by their means to more than 20,000 souls. The principal manufactures are those chiefly depending on the collieries; such as glass works, potteries, and iron founderies. A considerable source of wealth is also found in the rivers, which abound with various sorts of fish, especially trout and salmon; the Tweed being remarkable for the latter; great quantities of this fine fish being dried and pickled for exportation.

Northumberland is included in the northern circuit, is in the province of York and diocese of Durham; is divided into six wards, called BAMBOROUGH, CASTLE WARD, COQUET-DALE, GLENDALE, MORPETH and TINDALE; which contain one county town (Newcastle) 12 market towns and 460 parishes: it returns eight members to parliament, viz. two for the county, two for the town of Newcastle, two for Morpeth and two for Berwick-upon-Tweed. The members returned for the county in 1826, were the Hon. H. T. Liddell and Matthew Bell, Esq.

POPULATION.—According to the census of 1821, there were houses inhabited in the county, 4,081; uninhabited, 240; and houses building, 46. The number of families then resident in the county was, 8,297; comprising 15,925 males, and 19,256 females; total, 35,181: and by a calculation made by order of government, which included persons in the army and navy, for which was added after the ratio of about one to thirty prior to the year 1811, and one to fifty for that year and the census of 1821, to the returns made from the several districts; the population of the county, in round numbers, in the year 1700, was 118,000—in 1750, 141,700—in 1801, 162,300—in 1811, 177,900—and in 1821, 203,000. The increased population in the fifty years, from the year 1700, was 23,700—from 1750 to 1801, the increase was 20,600—from 1801 to 1811, the increase was 15,600—and from 1811 to 1821, the increased number of persons was 25,100: the grand total increase in the population of the county, from the year 1700 to the census of 1821, being about 85,000 persons.

ALNWICK, ALNMOUTH & NEIGHBOURHOODS.

ALNWICK, a borough, market town and parish, in the east division of the ward of Coquendale; the whole parish being comprehended in the deanery to which it gives name, is 304 miles N. N. W. of London, 34 N. of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, 30 S. S. E. of Berwick-upon-Tweed, 19 from Morpeth, and about 5 W. of the German ocean. It is most delightfully situated on the declivities of a hill, the foot of which is washed by the waters of the Aln, from which, and wick, the Saxon term for castle, it derives its name; and upon the great road leading from Newcastle-upon-Tyne to Edinburgh. In the year 1093 Malcolm III. with his son Edward, were killed here, and their army defeated, by Robert Mowbray, Earl of Northumberland, and about a mile from Alnwick there is a cross erected on the spot where Malcolm fell. His great grandson William I. invading England with an army of 80,000 men, was encountered here in 1174, when his troops were routed, and himself made prisoner; to perpetuate which memorable event, at a short distance from the town, a small neat monument is erected, in an enclosure close to the road side, and bears the following inscription. "William the Lion, King of Scotland, besieging Alnwick castle, was here taken prisoner, MCLXXIV." Alnwick appears to have been fortified in former times, from the vestiges of a wall still to be seen, and three gates which remain almost entire. Not many yards from the road leading to Newcastle, and close to the town of Alnwick, on an eminence, is a superb colossal pillar, to the memory of Hugh, Duke of Northumberland, erected by his grateful tenantry, as a mark of the high estimation in which they held him. Alnwick has a large town house, where the quarter sessions and the county courts are held; it is also the place where representatives are elected to serve in parliament for the county; and here also are held occasionally fashionable assemblies. Though a very ancient, Alnwick is not a parliamentary borough. The freemen, of whom there are about 300, are a body corporate by prescription, consisting of ten companies or fraternities; each company or trade being governed by an alderman, wardens or stewards, appointed annually. The freedom of the borough can only be obtained by patrimony or servitude, and the ceremony of initiation is truly singular and ridiculous. When a resident assumes his freedom, a holly tree is planted at the door of his house, the authorities of the town assemble, and, mounted on horseback, preceded by a band of music, and accompanied by the candidate for the freedom of the borough, who is also on horseback, and clad in white, march in cavalcade to a certain puddle, or as the people of Alnwick term it, the Freeman's Well, through which he must scramble, before he becomes free; after the ceremony is performed, which creates much merriment and laughter, the procession returns to the town, parade the principal streets, and the remainder of the day is spent in the most festive manner. This ceremony is owing to King John, who was mired in this well, and who, as a punishment to the inhabitants, for their not mending the road, made this a part of their charter. The government of the town is vested in twenty-four common council-men, and four chamberlains, who are chosen out of the former. The Duke of Northumberland, as lord of the manor, holds courts leet and baron, at Easter and Michaelmas; and the assizes for Northumberland are held twice a year in the moot hall; but the county gaol is at Morpeth, where all executions take place. A county court is held once a month, on Thursdays, in which debts under 40s. are recoverable; and debts under £6. may be sued for under certain restrictions. The parochial church of Alnwick, dedicated to St. Mary and St. Michael, is a large Gothic structure, situated at the end of Bailiffgate, and has recently been repaired and altered: the living is a curacy, (formerly appropriated to the priory) in the gift of the Bishop of Durham, and in the incumbency of the Rev. William Proctor. Here are some very valuable scholastic intersections, two of which, under the patronage of the Duke and Duchess of Northumberland, are memorials of the benevolence of these noble and charitable personages; the others are, three borough schools, and several Sunday schools. The institutions for promoting christian knowledge, and the charities for the relief of the poor and sick, are bible associations, a mechanics' institute, dispensary, and various bequests appropriated to the comfort of the poor of Alnwick and the neighbouring places. Here are chapels for Roman catholics, baptists, presbyterians, Wesleyan methodists, for the 'secession church,' &c. A savings' bank was established in 1816, and a subscription library, in Fenkle-street, in 1783. The streets of Alnwick are, in general, wide and well paved; its shops are numerous and respectable, with several good inns. The town is admirably supplied with water, which is obtained without labour, by means of fountains, situated in different parts; and it is well lighted with gas. Manufactures have made little or no progress in this town, and the trade is entirely of a local nature, with the exception of that derived from the coal mines, those about three miles from Alnwick producing some of the best in England. On the town moor, bricks and tiles are made; and the trade in corn is by no means inconsiderable. In the neighbourhood are many splendid seats and mansions; but that which claims high precedence, is Alnwick castle, the noble mansion of the family of Percy, Earls of Northumberland, which stands on the south side of the Aln, opposite the town; proudly seated on a commanding eminence, and, with its beautiful pleasure grounds, forms the most distinguished ornament of the vicinity of Alnwick. The weekly market is on Saturday; and the three principal fairs are on the 12th of May, the last Monday in July, and the first Tuesday in October, chiefly for corn, poultry and cattle. There are, besides, two petty fairs or 'hirings,' as they are called, for country and husbandry servants, held the first Saturday in March and November. The parish of Alnwick, including the hamlet of DENWICK, in Bambrough ward, contained, in 1821, 5,927 inhabitants.

ALNMOUTH, or Alemouth, is a small sea-port and township in the parish of Lesbury, and ward of South Bambrough, five miles from Alnwick, situate at the mouth of the river Aln; is a safe harbour for fishing vessels, and abounds with excellent fish. Large quantities of corn are annually shipped here, which, with the fishery, forms the principal trade and occupation of the inhabitants, the number of whom, by the census of 1821, was 406.

BEDLINGTON, a parish, containing a township of the same name, which is five miles from Morpeth: although locally situated in the county of Northumberland is in the east division of Chester ward, in the county of Durham, near to the river Blyth. With the exception of the iron works here, which are supposed to be the largest in the north of England, this place contains nothing worthy of notice, either to the inquisitive tourist or the man of business. The whole parish, by the last census, contained 1,862 inhabitants. COWPEN, a township, in the parish of Horton, and in the east division of Castle ward, in the county of Northumberland, is situated a few miles from Bedlington, and owes the support of its population to the extensive coal mining concerns here. The entire parish of Horton, in 1821, contained 2,099 inhabitants, of which number 1,765 were of the township of Cowpen.

BELFORD, BAMBROUGH, LOWICK AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

BELFORD, a small and neat market town, in the parish to which it gives name, and in the north division of the ward and deanery of Bambrough, on the road from London to Edinburgh, is 322 miles N.W. of the metropolis, 49 N. of Newcastle, and 15 S. S. E. of Berwick-upon-Tweed. The town chiefly consists of two tolerably wide streets, the houses composing which are well built; and the situation is rendered agreeable and pleasing both by nature and art, being completely sheltered by beautiful hills and crags, adorned with lofty trees, and skirted by ornamental gardens and plantations. The parish church, a small handsome edifice, dedicated to St. Mary, is a curacy, in the patronage of William Clark, Esq. and incumbency of the Rev. John James. The patron of the living is also lord of the manor, and his residence is at Belford hall, a large and elegant modern erection, encompassed by grounds beautifully laid out and tastefully planted. At this hall petty causes are heard before Mr. Clark; and a constable is chosen annually in each township of the parish. Races are for the future to be held here, and a judicious spot of ground has been selected, and nearly completed, under the superintendence of several gentlemen of distinction and spirit. There are a few mineral springs to be found in the parish, and the town is well supplied with water from several fine streams in the vicinity. The market is held on Tuesday, when large quantities of corn are sold here by sample for exportation. The fairs are on Tuesday before Whitsuntide, and the other on the 23d of August. The whole parish, by the census of 1821, contained 1,783 inhabitants, of which number 1,208 were in the township of Belford. BAMBROUGH is a township, parish and village, giving name to the hundred in which it is situated, five miles east of Belford; and though now an inconsiderable place was once a royal burgh, and sent two members to parliament. The ruins of its ancient castle are still to be seen standing upon almost a perpendicular rock close to the sea, and from this place constant watch is kept, and signals made to mariners navigating this dangerous coast. The whole parish, in 1821, contained 3,342 inhabitants, of which number 404 were in the township of Bambrough and BAMBROUGH CASTLE. LOWICK is a parish and small village, in the east division of Glendale ward, about six miles from Belford, the whole parish containing 1,800 inhabitants.

POST OFFICE, BELFORD, John M'Donald, Post Master.—Letters for LONDON and all parts of the South are despatched every afternoon at four, and arrive every morning at half-past eight.—To EDINBURGH and all parts of the North are despatched every morning at half-past eight, and arrive every afternoon at half-past three.—Letters to BAMBROUGH are despatched every morning at ten by a horse post, and arrive every morning at eight.

BELLINGHAM,

WARK, FALSTONE AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

BELLINGHAM, a small market town, situated in the parish to which it gives name, in the N. W. division of Tindale ward, is 296 miles from London, 30 W. N. W. of Newcastle, and 16 N. N. W. of Hexham; seated on the north bank of the North Tyne, and said to be the site of a Roman station; the neighbourhood abounding with remains of circular intrenchments and fortified villages of the ancient Britons. The parish contains from 7,000 to 8,000 acres of moorland uninclosed, the greater part of which form the common called Hareshaw, which abounds with partridge, grouse, black game, hares, &c. The church, a small ancient structure, dedicated to St. Cuthbert, is pleasantly situated on a rising ground, and the churchyard forms a fine terrace over the river. The advowson and benefice is vested in the governors of Greenwich hospital, and the Rev. John Davis is the rector. Here is a chapel for the Roman catholics and one for the united secession church of Scotland; an endowed school, and a library or book club, established in 1809. A weekly market is held here on Saturday, and an annual fair on the first Saturday after the 15th of September; there are besides two 'hirings' for servants, held on the Saturdays before the 12th of May and 12th of November. The whole parish contained, in 1821, 6,464 inhabitants, of which number about 600 were in the township of Bellingham.

WARK is a small parish and village, 5 miles from Bellingham and 11 from Hexham, in the same ward and division as the former town. The habitations are chiefly in the occupation of farmers and agricultural labourers. It contains a national school, and a population of 866 persons, 367 of that number being in WARK QUARTER.

FALSTONE, 8 miles west of Bellingham, is a small agricultural parish, containing some habitations widely separated, not forming what may be termed a village. The parish is in the same hundred as Bellingham, and contains about 500 inhabitants.

POST.—Letters are despatched to and received from Hexham daily, by a common carrier; but there is no regular receiving house.

BERWICK-UPON-TWEED, TWEEDMOUTH

AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

BERWICK-UPON-TWEED, so called to distinguish it from North Berwick, in East Lothian, and several Berwicks in England, a royal burgh and seaport town, is 337 miles from London, 64 from Newcastle-upon-Tyne, and 49 from Morpeth. It is a town of considerable importance, of Saxon or Teutonic origin, and situated on the north side of the river Tweed, about half a mile from the spot where that river empties itself into the German ocean, in the bay of Berwick. It was originally a Scots town, but has been for a considerable period a distinct liberty, having a small district attached to it, called Berwick bounds, which run about three miles north, and about the same distance ascending the Tweed. The antiquity of this celebrated frontier town is, beyond all doubt, very great; it is mentioned as a place of great strength in the reign of Osbert, one of the last kings of Northumberland, and is said to be the place where the Danes landed in one of their incursions under Hubba, in the year 867. It continued in the possession of the Saxons for some time, and afterwards in that of the Danes, until the Scottish king, Gregory (who was cotemporary with Alfred the Great), took it by assault. About the year 1098 Berwick was given to the see of Durham, by Edgar, but the donation was soon after resumed, in consequence of the ingratitude of Ralph Flambert, who had been consecrated bishop of that see. William the first of Scotland, who, in 1174, had joined Henry's three sons in rebellion, was taken prisoner near Alnwick, and conducted in chains before Henry, who obliged him to pay homage for the whole of Scotland, and as a security, he was forced to deliver up to Henry the fort of Berwick, together with all the principal forts of Scotland. In 1291 the states of England and Scotland, with Edward I, assembled at Berwick, to determine the claims of Robert Bruce and John Baliol, to the Scottish crown; when, after numerous conferences, on the 17th of November, in the following year, the king appointed John Baliol successor to the crown. This town was formerly the principal one of the kingdom of Merse, standing on a gentle declivity, close by the sea, which, till very lately, was regularly fortified, having high walls, and a ditch on the north-east, the river serving for a moat on the south side: its gates and a drawbridge are still standing, but the cannon have for some time been removed to Leith. Berwick is a regular, well built town, joined to England by a fine bridge of hewn stone, of fifteen spacious and elegant arches; the whole length of the bridge is 1,164 feet, and its width 17 feet. At each of the pillars, which are fourteen in number, there is an outlet to both sides, for the greater safety of foot passengers, when carriages, &c. are meeting on the bridge. The sixth pillar, from the Berwick side, separates that town from the county palatine of Durham, and the battlements at the outlet of this pillar are always covered with sods, as a guide to constables and others in the execution of warrants. The town is governed by a mayor, bailiffs and burgesses; the mayor or four bailiffs act as sheriffs, and select its own magistrates. A gaol delivery is held quarterly, if necessary, for the trial of capital offences; general quarter sessions are held four times in the year; a court of pleas, for the recovery of debts to any amount, and for the trial of land actions; and the mayor and bailiffs, as lords of the manor, hold courts leet and baron twice in the year. Berwick returns two members to parliament; those elected in 1826 to represent the borough were, Sir Francis Blake, Bart. and Major Marcus Beresford; the number of electors is about 1,000, and the mayor and bailiffs are the returning officers. There is but one church under the establishment here, the living of which is a vicarage, in the gift of the Bishop of Durham, and in the incumbency of the Rev. Joseph Barnes. The other places of worship are, 'the high meeting-house,' 'the low meeting-house,' a chapel for the 'united associate synod,' and others for methodists, baptists and Roman catholics. The ancient castle, now in ruins, which must have been of great strength, is the principal object of attraction to the antiquary in this town. The public erections, besides those devoted to divine worship, are, the beautiful town hall; the exchange; a noble pier, of considerable length, forming a fashionable walk in the summer; and the fine bridge already mentioned. Here are several valuable schools, three of which were founded by the corporation, for the education of burgesses' children of both sexes; a charity school, supported by various bequests made at different times by charitable individuals; a school of industry; and national and Sunday-schools. The principal branch of trade is the exportation of salmon, caught in the Tweed, to the London market; the fishing commences on the 10th of January, and finishes on the 10th of October: the scene of fishing is from the mouth of the river to Norham, a distance of seven miles. Coal mines are in the neighbourhood, & their produce forms a material article of exportation also from this port. The country around Berwick is well fitted for the purposes of agriculture, and though in general flat, yet are some fine views to be obtained in the neighbourhood; while the town and port presents, generally, a scene of activity found in prosperous commercial sea-ports. The weekly market is on Saturday. The fairs are on the Friday in Trinity week, for cattle; the second Wednesday in May, the first Wednesday preceding the 26th August, and the first Wednesday in November, chiefly for cattle and horses. The whole parish of Berwick-upon-Tweed contained, in 1821, 8,723 inhabitants, of which number upwards of 5,000 were resident within the walls.

TWEEDMOUTH, a parish and chapelry, in the hundred of Islandshire and county of Durham, is situated at the mouth of the river Tweed, three quarters of a mile from Berwick, and consists of several streets, irregularly built, but the general appearance of the place has been much improved of late years. Here is a chapel of ease under Berwick, of which the Rev. Jno. Leach is the incumbent. The inhabitants, as in Berwick, are extensively engaged in the salmon fishery; and its other branches of trade, exports and imports, are of the like nature with that town. In 1821 the number of inhabitants in the chapelry was 4,673.

BLYTH AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

BLYTH, or Blyth nook, a small sea-port town, township and chapelry, in the parish of Earsdon, and in the east division of Castle ward, situated on the German ocean, at the confluence of the river Blyth, is 283 miles N. N. W. of London, 13 N. N. E. of Newcastle, 8 E. S. E. of Morpeth, and the like distance north from Shields. This town, although it has much improved in appearance, trade and population of late years, yet it is matter of surprise that it has not risen to higher celebrity, for its situation is exceedingly favourable for sea bathing; its sands for three miles to the south being considered the finest on the east coast; the harbour is very safe, and the newly built suburb of Waterloo commands beautiful prospects. The parish church is at Earsdon, the living of which is a vicarage, in the incumbency of the Rev. M. Warkman. The chapel of ease, at Blyth, was erected in 1751, by Sir M. W. Ridley, Bart. who is lord of the manor; the incumbent is the Rev. Robert Greenwood. In the town and suburbs are four other places of worship, belonging to dissenters from the established church. The custom-house at this place is under the control of Newcastle. Upwards of 1,000 vessels are cleared out annually from this port or creek; and about fourteen keels and two steam vessels are constantly employed in the river. A light-house was erected here in 1788, by the great friend of the place, Sir M. W. Ridley, Bart. and there is also a beacon, or 'basket rock light.' There are several coal mines in the neighbourhood, and about 16,000 tons of their produce are annually exported from hence and Hartley. The latter place is noted as having given birth to William Carr, perhaps the strongest man in England; his father was a blacksmith, who removed to Blyth, where his son became his apprentice: when seventeen years of age he was six feet three inches & three quarters in height; weighed sixteen stone, and could easily lift seven or eight hundred-weight. Five seamen being unable to carry an anchor (weighing half a ton) and a piece of cable attached, this young Hercules carried it himself over the sands into his father's shop. A considerable portion of the town of Blyth extends into the township of Cowpen, in the parish of Horton; the population of the place must therefore be taken including its several suburbs, which, in 1821, contained together 3,000 inhabitants.

POST OFFICE, BLYTH, Hannah Sheaton, Post Mistress.—Letters are despatched to NORTH SHIELDS, by a Mail cart, every afternoon at half-past three in winter, and half-past four in summer, and arrive every morning at half-past ten.

HALTWHISTLE, HENSHAW & NEIGHBOURHOODS.

HALTWHISTLE, a small market town, in the extensive parish to which it gives name, in the west division of Tindale ward, is 284 miles from London (by way of Alstone) 36 from Newcastle and 15 from Hexham; situated on the south branch of the river Tyne, in a country remarkable for the romantic beauty of its scenery. For the space of a mile, on either side of the river, the land is in a high state of cultivation, the natural fertility of the soil having been greatly assisted by the improved system of Northumbrian husbandry; beyond those limits the aspect of the country is bleak, barren and hilly, abounding with peat mosses and dangerous morasses, which, in the winter season, render the passage across the moors extremely difficult, if not impracticable. Haltwhistle is seated in the centre of the middle branch, so renowned in history, for the feats in arms of the border chivalry. In the immediate neighbourhood are the ruins of several castles and fortresses, which exhibit the remains of ancient grandeur, in a manner highly interesting to the antiquary and curious traveller; and in the neighbourhood are many seats and mansions belonging to opulent individuals. The parish church, dedicated to the Holy Cross, is situated on the south side of the town, and the church-yard forms a fine terrace, commanding beautiful and varied prospects of the adjacent country. The living is a vicarage, in the gift of the Bishop of Durham; the Rev. N. J. Hollingsworth is the incumbent, and the Rev. James Fox the present curate. The presbyterians have a chapel here; and there is a charity school, endowed in 1719, in which are educated about 80 boys: besides which there are several Sunday schools, affording instruction to nearly 200 poor children. The weekly market is on Thursday; and the fairs are on the 14th of May and 22d November, for cattle, &c. The whole parish contained, in 1821, 3,583 inhabitants, of which number only 707 were resident in the township.

HENSHAW is a township and village in the parish of Haltwhistle, about 2 miles east of that town, containing, in 1821, about 600 inhabitants.

HEXHAM,

ALLENDALE, CORBRIDGE, HAYDON BRIDGE AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

HEXHAM, an ancient market-town, is 280 miles from London, and 20 west of Newcastle, delightfully seated on an eminence, on the south bank of the Tyne, about one mile below the junction of the two grand branches of that river. It is comprehended in the south division of Tindale ward, and is the principal place of the parish to which it gives name, as it is of the regality or liberty of Hexhamshire, which was formerly held by the bishop of Hexham, but is now annexed to the archiepiscopal see of York. It was anciently written Hextolde's-ham, or Hextolde's-holme, from the burn or rivulet heretofore called Hextolde; and the Normans, it is said, contracted it to Hexham. In early history the town of Hexham has been remarkable for the scene of historical events of peculiar interest, amongst which the battle of Hexham levels, which for a time decided the important contest of the white and red roses, is not the least interesting. The Hexham riot, which occurred in March, 1791, was of the most direful nature, and arose out of the militia regulations, which were opposed by the inhabitants, of whom, forty-five were killed by the soldiery, and three hundred severely wounded, after the riot act had been read, without having the effect of dispersing the mob. The midsummer quarter sessions are held here; the justices for Tindale ward hold a petty sessions the first Tuesday in each month; courts leet and baron are held within a month after Easter and Michaelmas; and courts frequently, for the recovery of debts under forty shillings. Thomas Richard Beaumont, Esq. and Diana, his wife, are lord and lady of the manor; and the duties attached to the office of bailiff of the regality of Hexham are most ably discharged by John Bell, Esq. The manufactures of this town consist of gloves, felt hats, shoes and tanned leather; but these several branches are not of any vast importance, the principal trade being of a local nature, including that derived from the collieries in the neighbourhood, by which the town is supplied. There is only one church in Hexham, but this one has high claims to the notice of the stranger and antiquary; it is the greatest ornament and boast of the town, and ranks first amongst its public edifices: it is called the Abbey church, or Old Cathedral of Hexham, and is said to have been the fifth stone church erected in England, and the first that was constructed with chancel and aisles; the living is a perpetual curacy, in the patronage of the lord and lady of the manor, and in the incumbency of the Rev. William Airey. The other places of worship are, a chapel each for the Roman catholics, presbyterians, methodists and independents. Here are alms-houses for four poor widows, a free grammar school, and one upon the Lancasterian and Dr. Bell's systems. The vicinity of Hexham is noted for its great number of gardens, the surplus produce of which, after supplying this town, is sent to Newcastle; about three hundred acres of land are laid out for this kind of cultivation, which tends much to enhance the aspect of fertility that prevails around here. A market is held here every Tuesday, and an inferior one on Saturdays; and from the end of February to Midsummer, and from October to Christmas, an extensive cattle market is held on alternate Tuesdays. The annual fairs are on the 6th of August, for cattle, lambs, &c.; and on the 9th of November for horses, cattle and swine: a tryst fair was also established in 1824, to be held on the 25th of March and 24th of October, for the sale of stock; and three 'hirings' are held in the year, viz. the first Tuesday in March and the first Tuesdays after the 12th of May and November, for husbandry and domestic servants. The entire parish of Hexham, including the township of Hexhamshire, contained, in 1821, 5,436 inhabitants, of which number 4,116 were of the township of Hexham.

ALLENDALE is a small market town and parish, in the south division of Hexham shire and ward of Tindale, 283 miles from London, 29 from Newcastle and 10 from Hexham. The town is situated on an eminence, on the east bank of the Allen, and contains some well-built dwelling-houses and a spacious market-place, where are the ruins of an ancient cross. The parish church is a neat stone structure, rebuilt in 1807; the living is a perpetual curacy, in the gift of Colonel and Mrs. Beaumont, the lord and lady of the manor; who are also the possessors of the valuable lead mines at Coal-cleugh and Allenheads, in this parish. There is one methodist chapel in the town; the society of friends have a meeting house at Burn-foot; and here is a branch Bible society and subscription library. There are in the parish several Sunday-schools; and at Bride's hill is a free school, founded in 1693, by Mr. Christopher Wilkinson. The hills surrounding this dale abound with grit limestone; those from east to west exhibiting in general, a sterile and desolate aspect, but which conceal mineral treasures of great value. The market-day is on Friday; and the fairs are, the last Friday in April, the 22nd of August, and on the first Friday after the 29th of October, for the sale of horned cattle, horses, &c. The whole parish of Allendale contained, in 1821, 4,629 inhabitants, of which number, about 1,000 were resident in the town.

CORBRIDGE, formerly a parliamentary borough and market town, is a township, in the parish and deanery to which it gives name, and in the east division of Tindale ward, four miles east of Hexham. The town is well built, and in great repute as a salubrious situation. The ancient parish church is dedicated to St. Andrew, and is in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Carlisle, and incumbency of the Rev. Geo. Wilson. Here are a chapel each for Roman catholics, Wesleyan and primitive methodists and independents; and a subscription school. Farmers and agricultural labourers form the chief of the inhabitants, the number of whom, in the township, in 1821, was 1,254.

HAYDON BRIDGE is a considerable village and chapelry, in the parish of Warden, about six miles west of Hexham, and is to be noticed as containing a valuable free school, for children of both sexes, of the chapelry of Haydon; the boys being instructed in the higher branches of literature and the mathematics. The commissioners of Greenwich hospital derive large revenues from the quarries of lime-stone, free-stone, coals, lead, &c. on the estates of the late Earl of Derwentwater, sequestered to this noble institution, upon the attainder of that nobleman in 1716. The population of the parish of Warden, according to the parliamentary returns for 1821, was 2,072 persons.

MORPETH,

A BOROUGH, market-town and parish, situated on the river Wansbeck, which forms the boundary of Morpeth and Castle wards, is 289 miles from London, 30 from Hexham, and 15 north of Newcastle. The town extends into the township of Buller's Green, which forms its northern suburb, and for the most part is sheltered in a warm vale, surrounded by a rich and cultivated country. The borough of Morpeth is established by prescription, and is governed by two bailiffs, seven aldermen, fourteen proctors, and a serjeant at mace, and sends two members to parliament. The bailiffs are chosen from four persons, presented by the free burgesses to the lord of the manor; the present lord is the Earl of Carlisle, who holds a manorial court twice in the year; petty sessions are held here the first Wednesday in every month; and quarter sessions for the county, alternately with Alnwick, Newcastle and Hexham. The members elected in 1826 to represent this borough in parliament were, Lord Viscount Morpeth and William Ord, Esq.; the number of electors is about three hundred, and the senior bailiff is the returning officer. The manufactures of Morpeth have not yet arrived to great consequence; at present they consist of flannel and carpet manufactories, and there are four respectable tanneries, and two considerable breweries. The parochial church, a plain edifice, dedicated to St. Mary, is seated on an eminence; the living is a rectory, in the gift of the Earl of Carlisle, and in the incumbency of the Rev. Frederic Ekins. Here is also a chapel of ease under the establishment, and meeting-houses for the presbyterians, methodists and Roman catholics. The scholastic institutions are, the grammar school, endowed by Edward VI.; the English free school, erected in 1792; and two Sunday-schools. Morpeth dispensary, a valuable establishment, was opened in 1817; a subscription library, in Old gate, in the same year; a mechanics' institute, in 1825; and the savings' bank, in 1816. The town-hall, in the Market-place, was erected in 1714, the lower part of which is occasionally used for scenic representations. A new county gaol, house of correction, court house, &c. are now in rapid progress of erection, and when completed will form a large pile of buildings, which, from the plan, will be appropriate and convenient to their several intended purposes. The general appearance of the country around this place is of the most diversified character; the scenery very beautiful and romantic, and viewed to great advantage from 'the terrace,' on the bank of the river, which is a public promenade, tastefully laid out at the expense of the corporation, for the accommodation of the inhabitants. The weekly market is on Saturday, which is exceedingly well supplied with corn, butchers' meat, stock, &c. The fairs are on the Wednesday, Thursday and Friday se'nnight before Whitsuntide, and on the Wednesday before the 22nd of July. Races are held on the course, at the north end of the town, on the Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday in the first week in September; towards the support of which the representatives of the borough contribute £25. each. The whole parish of Morpeth contained, by the census of 1821, 4,292 inhabitants, of which number 3,415 were returned as belonging to the borough.

NEWCASTLE-UPON-TYNE AND GATESHEAD.

NEWCASTLE, borough, market town and port, and the most important trading town in Northumberland, is 273 miles N.N.W. of London. 119 S.E. of Edinburgh, 64 from Berwick-upon-Tweed, 56 E. of Carlisle, 15 N. of Durham, and 6 from North Shields. It is situated at the southern extremity of this county, on the north bank of the Tyne, at the distance of eight miles and a half from the confluence of that river with the German ocean, and forms, with its precincts, a distinct county, called 'the town and county of Newcastle-upon-Tyne.' The origin of this place has been traced back to a remote period, and industrious learned historiographers go back as far as the year 120, when Ælius Hadrianus came into Britain and built a wall eighty Roman miles in length, from sea to sea, the erection beginning at Pons Ælii (the present Newcastle) and ended at Tunnocelum, on Solway frith, at which place were stationed the first cohort of Ælian marines. It is certain that Newcastle bridge was of Roman origin, for coins of emperors both before and after the time of Adrian were found in its piers, after the great flood of 1771; and later discoveries have supported the circumstances, ascribing it to have been possessed by the Romans, as, in digging the foundation of the new county court in 1810, two Roman altars, coins of Antoninus Pius, and several other Roman antiquities were discovered. Newcastle was formerly walled round: this is ascertained by the charter of the 17th of King John, and by a grant of Edward I. to the black friars, of a passage through the new wall to their garden. The last named monarch united Pampodon with Newcastle, which occasioned the new wall to be built through the close of the Carmelites, on Wall Knoll: after completing the walls, the town was divided into twenty-four wards; the gates were all embattled, and the walls at all points defended with strong towers; the walls were twelve feet high, eight feet thick, and strengthened with a fosse, uniformly, twenty-two yards in width. Having thus briefly stated the claims of Newcastle to great antiquity, and the importance in which it must have been held in early times, it is also the province of this work to show the high consequence with which it is viewed in the present day, to the man of commerce and trade, and as a place of high consideration to the government and revenue of this kingdom.

The coal trade, it has been observed by an historian, 'hath made this town to flourish in all trades,' and it has, for several generations, been a fruitful nursery for hardy and valuable British seamen. The burgesses of this town received a royal licence in 1235, 'to dig coals and stones in the common soil;' but previous to this period, Newcastle held a distinguished rank amongst the principal commercial ports in this kingdom. In 1280, according to a document, the revenues of the town had increased so much by the sale of coals as at that time to be worth £200. a year, a considerable sum in those days. To follow, step by step, the progress by which this mineral has given so much importance to Newcastle, would exceed the limits by which this work is bounded, in treating generally of the place. In 1791 Newcastle shipped coastwise 404,367 chaldrons, and over sea 45,702 chaldrons; in 1801 coastwise 452,092, and over sea 50,401; in 1811 coastwise 634,371, and over sea 18,054; in 1821 coastwise 692,321, over sea 48,097; and in 1826 coastwise 800,437, and over sea 62,620. Thus it will be seen that the shipments of this article coastwise has been gradually increasing, and seldom retrograded in the intermediate years. In time of warfare the exports over sea were consequently affected, but since the return of peace they have continued to increase. It must here be taken into account, that a Newcastle chaldron is nearly equal to two of the London measure. The port dues at Newcastle, payable to the corporation as conservators of the river Tyne, amounted in 1826 to £7,105. 18s. 7d. and the dues paid in London, on every imperial chaldron imported into that port is 1s. 4½d. [A list of the principal coal owners and fitters will be seen under that particular head, in the directory of this town.] The Greenland fishery has been attended with success, variable and not highly important to this port; there are generally three ships sent out annually to the fisheries from the Tyne. Besides coals the exports from the river Tyne are, cinders, glass, earthenware, cast & wrought iron and steel, pig, sheet, and red and white lead, lead shot, painters' colours, tar, copperas, sal-ammoniac, lamp-black, grindstones, flag-stones, fire-stones, bricks, canvas, soap, &c. The principal articles of import are, corn, clover and other seeds, flax, hemp, linen yarn, wine, spirits, fruit, sugar, tobacco, barilla, butter, cheese, tallow, hides, skins, oak, bark, coffee, mahogany and other woods, staves, tar, iron, &c. &c. The manufactures of Newcastle and its vicinity are numerous and extensive, amongst which the principal are, the iron and glass works; the latter are of high importance, and long have been reckoned so, as paying an immense duty to the revenue. The foundries, soaperies, breweries, potteries, roperies, sail cloth manufactories and tanneries are very large. Here are also salt, lead and chymical works, a shot tower; and also corn, mustard and paper mills, malt-kilns, and colour and glue manufactories. Newcastle has received no fewer than thirty-six royal charters from various successive monarchs, commencing with the one granted by William Rufus, in 1087; the last bestowed by James I. in 1604. The corporate body, as it is now constituted, consists of a mayor, recorder, sheriff, ten aldermen, twenty-four common councilmen, twenty-four electors, two coroners, town clerk and under sheriff, sword bearer, clerk of the chamber, eight chamberlains, a quay master, and other inferior officers and constables. Newcastle returns two members to parliament; the representatives elected in 1826 to represent this flourishing town were, Sir Matthew White Ridley, Bart, of Blagdon, and Cuthbert Ellison, Esq. of Hebburn hall: the number of freemen is about 3,500, and the mayor is the returning officer. Quarter sessions are held here before the mayor, recorder and aldermen, four times a year; the assizes for the county in March and August; a court of requests in February, May, August and November, for disposing of claims under forty shillings; a mayor's court every Monday, for the determining of civil actions, between freemen only; and a county court, every fourth Wednesday, before the under-sheriff. The churches under the establishment are, St. Nicholas', an ancient and beautiful edifice, founded in 1091, the living of which is a vicarage, in the patronage of the Bishop of Carlisle, and incumbency of the Rev. John Dodd. St. John's church, in Westgate-street, is also an antique erection, built about the latter end of the thirteenth century; the living is a perpetual curacy, of which the vicar of St. Nicholas' is patron, and the Rev. Henry Allison Dodd is the incumbent. All Saints', at the foot of Pilgrim-street, is a modern structure; the benefice is a curacy, the gift is also with the vicar of St. Nicholas' and the present curate is the Rev. R. Green. St. Ann's, a chapel of ease to the last-named church, on the New-road, has the Rev. Moses Manners for its minister. St. Andrew's, at the top of Newgate-street, is the oldest sacred edifice in Newcastle, and the living is in the gift of the Rev. John Dodd, and incumbency of the Rev. Henry Deer Griffith. A new chapel of ease to St. Nicholas' is about to be erected, on Magdalen meadow; and St. Thomas a Becket's chapel, at Bridge end, is to be taken down, which will widen the approach to the bridge: the Rev. Richard Clayton is the present chaplain of St. Thomas a Becket's. The other places of worship are, five chapels of the Scotch establishment, three united secession, three baptist, two independent, two Wesleyan methodist, one each new connexion, primitive and independent methodists; one each for the Sandemanians, Swedenborgians and unitarians; one Roman catholic chapel, and one friends' meeting house. The public buildings, exclusive of those appropriated to divine worship are, the exchange, on Sand-hill, a spacious stone structure, contains the Guildhall, or town court, the merchants' court, offices of the town clerk, subscription news' rooms, &c. The new gaol and house of correction is in Carlisle-street. The custom-house is a plain brick building, near the middle of the Quay; the pilot office, on the Quay side; the tax office is also on the

Quay side; the assay office is in Dean-court; the stamp office, in Westgate-street; and the chamber of commerce is at the exchange. The places of amusement are, the theatre, in Mosley-street; the assembly rooms, in Westgate-street; the racket court, behind the assembly rooms; the circus and riding-school, in the Forth; and the public walk called the Forth, a beautiful and healthy promenade. Races are held annually in the first week in July, on the Town moor, about a mile and a half north of the exchange. The institutions, religious, literary, philosophical, &c. are numerous in this town; affording, by their existence, and the liberal and enlightened manner in which they are supported, the evidence that commerce is not a pursuit that engrosses the sole attention of the inhabitants of Newcastle. [A list of the principal institutions will be found to succeed the names in the directory of this town.] The public schools are, the royal grammar school, founded in 1525: several other endowed charity schools, besides those attached to the several places of worship; and there are no fewer than twenty-one Sunday-schools, which give instruction to nearly four thousand children. The market accommodations here are upon a most ample and convenient scale, and the several places allotted for the sale of butchers' meat, corn, fish and vegetables, are well adapted for the sale and purchase of these various commodities. The market-days are Tuesday and Saturday, and are numerously attended by farmers, graziers and corn merchants. There are two fairs in the year, viz. on the 28th of August and 29th of October, of nine days' duration each, at which prodigious numbers of horses and all kinds of cattle are brought, and large quantities of woollen cloths. The population of the town and county of Newcastle (not including the parish of Gateshead) consisted, in 1801, of 34,363 persons; by the returns ordered in 1811, a decrease had taken place in the population, the number then being 34,026; and in 1821 the number of inhabitants had increased to 43,507; and it is estimated, that including Gateshead, at the present time (1828) the number of souls exceeds 60,000.

GATESHEAD, an ancient borough and parish, situate opposite to Newcastle, on the south side of the river Tyne, where the two places are connected by a handsome stone bridge, is comprehended in Chester ward, in the county of Durham. Its history and trade is so closely connected with Newcastle, already described, that with the exception of its religious establishments, government and local foundations, little remains to be noticed of the town. Its municipal government was anciently vested in a bailiff, by patent, under the Bishops of Durham, and since 1695 it has been governed by stewards, chosen by the borough holders and freemen. The local magistrates hold petty sessions every Saturday, at the Goat Inn, and a halmote is held annually for the manor of Gateshead, at which Nathl. Clayton, Esq. the present steward of the lord of the manor presides. Cuthbert Ellison, Esq. M.P. is the lessee of the 'park and manor.' St. Mary's, the parish church, is an ancient edifice; the living is a rectory, in the gift of the bishop of Durham, and incumbency of the Rev. John Collinson, whose curates are the Rev. George Cooper and the Rev. G. F. Ricketts. At Gateshead Fell, a parish newly constituted, is St. John's church, the first stone of which was laid on the 13th May, 1824; the living is a rectory, in the same patronage as St. Mary's, at Gateshead, and in the incumbency of the Rev. Wm. Hawks. Here are several benevolent institutions, alms-houses and charity schools; and an hospital for thirteen poor brethren, called 'St. James' hospital.' A shoe fair is held here in November. The population of Gateshead, in 1784, was estimated at 7,350 persons; in 1801 it amounted to 8,597; in 1811 to 8,782; and in 1821 it contained 11,767 inhabitants.

NORTH SHIELDS AND TYNEMOUTH,

WITH THE VILLAGES OF EARSDON, CHIRTON, CULLERCOATS, PRESTON, WHITLEY, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

NORTH SHIELDS, a sea-port and market-town, in the parish of Tynemouth, in the east division of Castle ward, and in the deanery of Newcastle, is 279 miles from London, 70 from Berwick-upon-Tweed, 26 from Hexham, 9 from Sunderland, and 6 from Newcastle-upon-Tyne. It is most advantageously situated for the purposes of commerce, on the northern shore of the Tyne, at its junction with the German ocean, opposite to South Shields; and, like that town, has risen, in modern times, from the rank of a humble village, consisting of a few fishermen's sheds, or shields (a provincial name for mean huts) to that of a populous and well-built thriving town. The oldest part of the town is a long narrow street, on the margin of the river; and, in bustle and confusion, bears a strong resemblance to Wapping, in London. The upper, or new town, is of recent erection, ascended in some places by more than one hundred stone steps: here the streets are spacious and well paved, the shops large and tastefully displayed, and when lighted with gas, which they are at night, have a respectable and wealthy appearance. The harbour of North and South Shields is about a mile and a half in length; and in spring tides it has sufficient water for vessels of five hundred tons burthen. Boats are constantly plying on the river, and the greatest facility is given to travelling between this town and Newcastle, by means of steam packets. At the foot of the town are two beacons, maintained by the Trinity-house, in Newcastle: and near to them is Clifford's fort, built in 1672, which effectually commands all vessels entering the river. The staple trade of this place is coal, but other branches of great consequence and magnitude have, within the last half century, insinuated and established themselves here; amongst which are, roperies, tanneries, potteries; chain cables, and various other productions from iron; and ship building. At one time the principal trade of Shields arose from the salt pans, and to this time the salt works continue of importance. The government of the town is with the magistrates; two or more holding a sessions weekly, at the George tavern, King-street; and the lord of the manor (the Duke of Northumberland) by his steward, holds courts leet and baron at Easter and Michaelmas, at the Northumberland Arms. Here are twelve places of worship, of which only one belongs to the established church, which is the parochial church of Tynemouth, situated at the head of Church way, and is a plain but commodious structure, dedicated to our Saviour. The living is a discharged vicarage, in the alternate patronage of the Duke of Northumberland and Sir Jacob Astley; the present vicar is the Rev. George Dixon, and his curate is the Rev. William Mark. The other religious erections belong to the establishment of Scotland, Roman catholics, the various dissenters; and the Jews also have a synagogue. Several valuable charitable and other institutions, schools and foundations add their share of consequence to this town, amongst which are, the dispensary, the poor-house, alms-houses; jubilee, industry, and sunday-schools; libraries, a mechanics' institute, and a theatre. The water-works were established in 1786, and the gas works in 1820. The country around this place is fertile and well cultivated; the land chiefly level and considerably above the encroachments of the sea: the inland prospect is cheerful & verdant, and the marine view bold and interesting. The weekly market is on Saturday; and the fairs are, the first Friday in November and the last Friday in April. The population of the township of North Shields, in 1801, consisted of 7,280 inhabitants; in 1811 it contained 7,699; and in 1821, 8,205.

TYNEMOUTH is situated about a mile eastward from the Market-place of Shields, and consists principally of one good street, the houses of which are well built; and during the bathing season it is a place of fashionable resort. The 'priors haven' and 'Percy's bay' are both fine bathing places, and the walks in the vicinity present many pleasing and romantic views. The principal object of attraction in antiquity is the 'castle of Tynemouth,' which, although shorn of its just proportions by the heavy and dilapidating hand of time, still presents remains of great architectural beauty. There are some mineral springs in this neighbourhood; and some fine seats, amongst which are Tynemouth lodge, the seat of William Linskill, Esq.; Chirton house, the residence of John Collingwood, Esq. &c. The whole parish of Tynemouth contained, in 1801, 14,345 inhabitants, in 1811, 19,042, and in 1821, 24,820, of which last number 9,454 were in Tynemouth township.

EARS DON, a parish, containing a village of the same name, in the same ward as North Shields, two miles and a half from that town, is situated upon a fine elevation. The parish church is a venerable pile, seated on the highest ground of the village, from which the views over the German ocean and the country inland are most extensive and pleasing. The entire parish contained, in 1821, 4,644 inhabitants, of which number 271 were of the township.

CHIRTON is a populous and straggling village, in the parish of Tynemouth, on the main road from Newcastle to North Shields, seven miles from the former, and about one from the latter town. The principal support of the population of this village is derived from the collieries, which are numerous and extensive in the immediate neighbourhood. Chirton house, in this village, was the birth-place of that celebrated naval hero, the late Lord Collingwood, and is now the residence of John Collingwood, Esq. brother to that brave nobleman. The township, in 1821, contained 4,351 inhabitants, having quadrupled its population since the census of 1801.

CULLERCOATS, a small village, close to the cliffs which hang over the German ocean, is two miles from Tynemouth, containing respectable accommodations for visitors in the bathing season. Here is a small chapel, and a mineral spring. This village contains about 550 inhabitants.

PRESTON, a small and neat village and township, in the parish of Tynemouth, is one mile from South Shields, and consists of one respectable broad street of good houses, with a population, by the last census, of 627 inhabitants.

WHITLEY, two miles from North Shields, in the parish of Tynemouth, is a very respectable and neat little village close to the sea; near to which is Whitley ark, the seat of Thomas Wright, Esq. By the census of 1821, about 550 inhabitants then formed the population of this village.

ROTHBURY, HARBOTTLE & NEIGHBOURHOODS.

ROTHBURY, a small market town, in an extensive parish to which it gives name, is 303 miles from London, 36 from North Shields, and 12 from Alnwick; delightfully seated in a sequestered and romantic glen; sheltered from the chill blasts of the north by towering hills, and on the south an abrupt bank rises in a pyramidal form, the summit of which is crowned by a stately tower. The Coquet rolls through the valley, enriching the land by its waters, which abound with trout and other delicious fish. The parish church is an ancient structure, dedicated to All Saints, and the living is a rectory, in the patronage of the Bishop of Carlisle, and incumbency of the Rev. Chas. Venables Vernon. The Duke of Northumberland is lord of the manor; but he possesses very little freehold property in the town. Here is a free school, connected with which is a 'central school,' the number of scholars are unlimited, and their education is conducted upon the Madras system. A small market is held every Friday, and four fairs annually, viz. on the Friday in Easter week, Whit-Monday, the 2nd of October, and 1st of November, for horses, cattle and sheep. The population of the whole parish, in 1821, consisted of 2,609 persons, of which number about 900 were inhabitants of the town.

HARBOTTLE, a village, in the parochial chapelry of Hallystone, is three miles and a half N. N. W. of Rothbury, situated in the valley of Riddesdale, on the banks of the Coquet. The castle, now in ruins, was in the reign of Edward I. a very strong fortress, and sustained an attack of the whole Scottish army in 1296. The village contains about 200 inhabitants.

SEATON SLUICE,

HARTLEY, MONK SEATON, HOLYWELL AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

SEATON SLUICE, or Seaton Delaval, is a small sea-port and township in the parish of Earsdon, in Castle ward, about three miles and a half south of Blyth, and is remarkable for its harbour, which is considered a great curiosity, being completely the work of art; the entrance to it from the German ocean is by a deep canal, cut out of solid rocks, and guarded by immense locks. Vessels of 300 tons burthen can lay here completely sheltered from all winds, beneath high grounds, by which this dock is surrounded. The coal trade here is the chief business, besides which there are extensive bottle works, belonging to Messrs. Carr and Co. and a large brewery of Messrs. Jobling and Co. About a mile to the west is Delaval park, the property of Sir Jacob Astley; the hall was destroyed by fire, together with a greater part of the splendid furniture, on the 3rd of January, 1822, and it remains now in ruins. In 1821, 240 inhabitants formed the population of this township, but the number has

WOOLER AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

WOOLER is an ancient market-town and parish, having no dependent township, in the east division of Glendale ward, 320 miles from London, 54 from North Shields, and 17 from Berwick-upon-Tweed; situated on a fine declivity, to the east of Cheviot, and near to a good trout stream, which discharges itself into the river Till. This town, in 1722, by conflagration, was laid in ashes: disasters of the same nature have at times had their attendant good, by giving to a spirited public an opportunity of improving the place in the style of its new erections; this cannot be said to apply to Wooler, which is neither elegant or convenient. Here is a dispensary, two Sunday-schools
